UNITED STATES AGREES TO CARRANZA PLAN

TOM M'DONOUGH SHOT BY NORTH SIDER WHO IS WOUNDED IN SIEGE

FRED BAUCH IS CAPTURED AFTER HOT GUN BATTLE

Barricades Self in Barn and Is Captured Only After Shot in the Leg from Riot-gun

BOTH WILL RECOVER

Small Ball Pierces McDonough's Cheek and Passes Into Lung But He Will Survive

Thomas J. McDonough, policeman, and Fred Bauch, 68, 216 Summer street, are in St. Francis hospital, wounded, as the result of a gun-battle between Bauch and eleven policemen Friday evening. While endeavoring to arrest Bauch in the latter's barn, McDonough was shot from above, the bullet striking him in the right jaw and ranging downward to his left lung. Although serious, the wound will not prove fatal, it was said at the hospital today.

Bauch was struck in the left leg by twelve buck-shot, fired from a riot-gun in the hands of Patrolman Rick. He is believed insane.

The shooting of McDonough occurred after he had been summoned by neighbors because Bauch was quarreling with his wife. When word of the shooting reached the police station, ten more policemen, headed by Chief Weber and Captain Dugan, rushed to the north side. They found Bauch barricaded on the second floor of his barn and a fight ensued in which more than a dozen shots were exchanged before Rick's riot-gun winged the beleaguered man and ended his resistance.

Only a fortnight ago Bauch was examined for his sanity, and declared by physicians to be sane, although subject to temporary aberration. Today, it was said at the hospital, he has become permanently deranged, obsessed with the hallucination that his family was seeking his death. The recent examination was conducted at the request of his family. They say that Bauch had repeatedly threatened to kill his wife.

Just Misses Lung
When an X-ray photograph was taken of McDonough at St. Francis hospital by Dr. Flynn last night, it was discovered that the bullet, which at first was thought to have lodged in the lung, had touched only the outer edge and there had stopped.

The bullet, according to Dr. Flynn, entered the flesh of the right cheek, grazing the outer edge of the jawbone and passing out. It again entered McDonough's body on the left breast, lodging against the shoulder bone and just under the collar bone—on the upper edge of the left lung.

Just a fraction of an inch in either direction might have caused death, or paralysis," Dr. Flynn told a TRIBUNE reporter on Saturday morning. "Near the point where the bullet stopped," Dr. Flynn stated, "is a large artery. Death would have probably occurred if this had been punctured. The region was surrounded with vital nerves. If these had been struck paralysis would probably have occurred."

Let Bullet Remain
After a consultation with physicians at the hospital Dr. Flynn decided that the best course to pursue was to let the bullet remain, at least for the present. In McDonough's body, the X-ray photograph showed its exact location, and it will not be taken out unless infection, which is improbable, according to physicians, sets in. They said that they would not consider the patrolman out of danger for about seventy-two hours. He is resting very comfortably, Dr. Flynn gave out, and is feeling no pain.

McDonough was given anti-tetanus treatment at once to prevent blood poisoning.

SUNDAY COOLER BUREAU PROMISE AS HEAT CLIMBS

Hot Wave on the Move at Last But the Mercury Soars Toward Record Today

CORN CROP ENDANGERED

Hundreds Die in the Middle West with Nineteenth Day of Unrelenting Heat

Good news!
The hot wave is leaving. This statement is made on the authority of the local weather bureau, which at 2:30 this afternoon said that Sunday would be cooler and that the area of intense heat has begun to move to the east. It will go slowly, but it is going.

In the meantime, the thermometer was climbing for a record. At 2 o'clock this afternoon it was at 97, and going up. If it passes 98 degrees, it will set a five-year record here.

Business Stops
CHICAGO, July 29.—Business in the middle west was at a standstill this afternoon as a result of a 19-day heat wave which reached its highest temperature today. The death toll for the last forty-eight hours reached 151 at noon today. Sixteen died today at Chicago; nine at Milwaukee; four at Aurora, Ill., and two at Kansas City. One hundred and twelve have died at Chicago within the last forty-eight hours.

At Milwaukee, Wis., and Belvidere, Ill., factories closed down when employees found it impossible to work in the driving heat. Department stores here planned to let their employees off two hours earlier. At some of the stores those who showed the slightest distress were ordered home. Stout people were told they would not have to work. Scores of horses dropped dead in Chicago streets today from exhaustion caused by the heat. It was estimated that several hundred persons were prostrated.

First reports of serious damage from the torrid wave throughout the crop section of Illinois came pouring in today. Reports of corn firing came in from the corn belt, and similar information indicated that the Iowa corn fields have begun to wilt under the sizzling sun and drought.

Reports of cool breezes developing in the far northwest were made by the weather bureau today. It held out the hope that it may develop sufficient strength to blow the heat out of the middle west.

Corn Crop Failing
TOPEKA, Kan., July 29.—Prospects of a bumper Kansas corn crop have gone a-glimmering. A month of drought and high temperatures have seriously injured all crops. With the largest acreage in years the state faces a half crop unless rain comes soon.

ARBITRATION OF MEXICAN TROUBLE ASSURED BY NOTE

American Reply Suggests Enlarging Discussion to Settle the Entire Difficulty

ACCEPTANCE HELD SURE

Meanwhile Washington Wonders Who Will Serve with Brandeis on the Commission

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The agreement of the United States to the proposal of Gen. Carranza for a settlement of the border problem was announced Friday night by Acting Secretary of State Frank L. Polk.

The communication addressed by Acting Secretary Polk to Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican ambassador-designate, follows:

"Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of July 12 last in which you transcribe a note addressed to me by the secretary of foreign relations of your government and to request that you will be good enough to transmit to him the following reply:

Will Draw up Protocol
"Mr. Secretary: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your excellency's note transmitted under date of July 12 by Lic. Eliseo Arredondo, your government's confidential agent in Washington, informing me that your excellency has received instructions from the chief of the constitutionalist army charged with the executive power of the union to propose that each of our governments name their commissioners, who shall hold conferences at some place to be mutually agreed upon and decide forthwith the question relating to the evacuation of the American forces now in Mexico and to draw up and conclude a protocol or agreement regarding the reciprocal crossing of the frontier by the forces of both countries, also to determine the origin of the incursions to date, in order to fix the responsibility therefor and definitely to settle the differences now pending of those which may arise between the two countries on account of the same or a similar reason, all of which shall be subject to the approval of both governments.

"In reply, I have the honor to state that I have laid your excellency's note before the president and have received his instruction to inform your excellency that the government of the United States is disposed to accept the proposal of the Mexican government in the same spirit of frank cordiality in which it is made.

"This government believes and suggests, however, that the powers of the proposed commission should be enlarged so that if happily a solution satisfactory to both governments of the question set forth in your excellency's communication may be reached, the commission may also consider such other matters that may improve the relations of the two countries, it being understood that such recommendations as the commission may make shall not be binding upon the respective governments until formally accepted by them.

"Should this proposal be accepted by your excellency's government I have the honor to state that this government will proceed immediately to appoint its commissioners and fix, after consultation with your excellency's government, the time and place and other details of the proposed conferences.

"Accept, Mr. Secretary, the assurances of my highest consideration.

"FRANK L. POLK,
Acting Secretary of State."

DESPERATE FIGHT NEAR POZIERES IS STILL IN PROGRESS

LONDON, July 29.—Two desperate German counter attacks against positions in Delville woods recently won by the British were repulsed, General Sir Douglas Haig reported today. The Teutons, he said, suffered heavy losses in the attacks, which occurred during the night.

"Hand to hand struggles northwards and northeastward of Pozieres continue without intermission," the British commander-in-chief continued.

"We are making progress despite violent opposition."

Haig reported "abundant evidence that the losses we inflicted during the last few days have been extremely severe, particularly around Delville wood, where two or three regiments appear to have been annihilated."

GREAT BRITON GIVES REQUIRED GUARANTEES CONCERNING BLACKLIST

TO APPLY ONLY TO FIRMS NAMED NO SECOND LIST

Says Firm Is Not Subject to Ban Unless Proved a German Government Agent

WASHINGTON, July 29.—British Ambassador Spring-Rice today delivered to the state department a formal written guarantee regarding the scope and application of the British blacklist as applied to American firms.

The memorandum which was from the foreign office guarantees that the black list will apply only to those firms actually named and there will be no so-called secondary blacklist. It also says that a firm is not subject to blacklist unless it is proved to be an agent of the German government or is sending money to Germany.

By secondary blacklist it was explained it was meant that American firms trading with blacklisted concerns would not themselves be blacklisted.

Spring-Rice delivered the communication to Assistant Secretary of State Phillips, who is acting secretary in the absence of Mr. Polk.

EVERY CITIZEN GETS CHANCE TO JOIN RED CROSS

House to House Canvass of the City Will Be Started Next Wednesday

WARD CAPTAINS MEET

Plans for a Big Drive Laid at a Luncheon at the Country Club on Friday

A gigantic selling campaign, designed to sell to fifteen hundred residents of La Crosse membership in the American Red Cross society, was outlined in detail to a corps of prominent women who have volunteered as "salesmanagers," at a luncheon at the Country Club Friday. Members of the executive committee of the newly formed La Crosse chapter of the Red Cross, and twenty women who have been selected as ward chairmen of the big campaign, were present at the luncheon.

To Reach Everyone
An enthusiastic, spirited campaign is assured as a result of the meeting. It will be an intensive campaign, in which every adult citizen of La Crosse will be given an opportunity to enlist under the humanitarian banner of the Red Cross. It will start next Wednesday.

Every house in the city will be visited by the volunteer workers. A close canvass of residential and business sections will be made, and to every person visited there will be put up the opportunity of service and the patriotic duty of membership and support of the Red Cross.

Ward captains received their instructions Friday in detail. They will gather about themselves corps of workers, and big drive will open early next Wednesday with every one "loaded and primed" for the campaign.

Distribute Ammunition
The meeting Friday at the Country Club was in the nature of a distribution of ammunition. Following a pleasant lunch, served in the coolest spot to be found on the Country Club veranda, Chairman S. W. Anderson of the membership committee gave a talk in which he outlined the plan of campaign—the house-to-house canvass and organization. Miss Helen Dorset told the ward captains what it was they had to sell—outlining what the great work of the Red Cross is, emphasizing the privilege of service which its membership involves, explaining why every citizen should join. Other members of the committee also spoke, giving the ward captains facts with which to meet the questions they will encounter in their work.

Mrs. Easton, for instance, told all about the new circles which have been formed to gather and make supplies for the soldiers now on the Mexican border, and told of the greater work of preparation for real war which the society will enter upon in the fall, or when the Mexican situation is cleared up.

It was explained to the ward captains that they are enlisted in a national campaign by which the

FOUR RIVERS ARE FORDED BY THIRD ON PRACTICE HIKE

Come Back to Camp Dripping But None the Worse for the Long March

CO. K RAIDS ICE WATER

Rush Guard Placed Over the Keg to Prevent Them Drinking While Heated

CAMP WILSON, Texas, July 29.—(Special.)—Little things like rivers do not stop the Third regiment even on practice marches. Early Wednesday morning the outfit started out on a march. They went down dusty roads, across fields and four times when they came to rivers they went right through clothes and all. The first time they went in about half way to the knee and each place thereafter was deeper until they finally forded a stream where it was breast deep.

The men were wringing wet when they returned, from water and perspiration, but dry clothes and ice water soon made them comfortable. Medical officers inspected their feet after the march.

Harry Noble of Company K who was detailed as police sergeant has been made supply sergeant. It will be his duty to take care of and supervise distribution of all supplies. Arnold Schueler, who was supply sergeant, has been made mess sergeant. Harlie Harris, former quartermaster sergeant, is now first duty sergeant.

Cots for members of the Third will be issued within a day or so. The government started issuing them on Wednesday.

One of the amusing incidents in Company K after the march was the attempted raid on the ice water which is kept in a keg in the cooks tent. The men were hot and thirsty and wanted cold water. It is not good to let them help themselves until they cool off, however, and a guard is placed over the water. Wednesday a double guard was necessary. Private Louis Storckel was stationed at the water keg, but when the rush came Lieut. Clyde Strachan had to go to his rescue.

Company Clerk Corp. Justin Dake has not been in training, but to show them just how good Wisconsin men are, he joined the others on the march Wednesday morning and came out in good condition.

BOMBS BLOW UP MENACE PRESSES

Three Explosions Under the Floor Ruin the Plant of Anti-Catholic Paper

AURORA, Mo., July 29.—The presses of The Menace, an anti-Catholic newspaper, were wrecked early today by the explosion of three bombs.

No one was injured, although the night watchman was in the building at the time.

The bombs had been placed under the floor, which was badly damaged, and some loose paper was set on fire by the explosion.

DOC COOK HAS RECRUIT

DENVER, Col., July 29.—Dr. F. A. Cook had left Denver today for greener fields in his search for $500,000 backing for his scheme to fly to the North pole in aeroplanes. The "Doc" enlisted Congressman Ben Hilliard's support of the plan for congress to appoint a commission to investigate the rival claims of North pole discoverers.

LONDON, July 29.—A German air raid in the early hours of today over Lincolnshire and Norfolk caused "no material damage," according to official statements today.

"Three airships at 1:30 this morning dropped thirty-two bombs over Lincolnshire and Norfolk without material damage," the war office asserted. "There were no casualties."

"At one place," the war office statement continued, "anti-aircraft guns drove off the air craft from their objective. Fog hampered the raiders."

BARABOO DEMOCRAT ANNOUNCES HE'LL OPPOSE J. J. ESCH

Herman Grotphorst Takes the Field for Congregational Seat from This District

Herman Grotphorst, prominent attorney of Baraboo, Wis., on Saturday morning announced his candidacy for United States congressman on the democratic ticket. Grotphorst will oppose Congressman John J. Esch, La Crosse, who will run on the republican ticket. Grotphorst is a member of the law firm of Grotphorst, Evans and Thomas, was a delegate to the democratic national convention at St. Louis, and has always been rated as a progressive. His candidacy was made known through a message to Attorney William F. Wolfe, who is a candidate for United States senator.

Attorney Evans, one of Mr. Grotphorst's partners, was recently appointed justice of the United States court of appeals for this district to succeed the late Judge William H. Seaman.

Grotphorst is a graduate of both the academic and law departments of the state university at Madison. He graduated in the same class with Congressman Esch many years ago. For years Mr. Grotphorst has been the leading lawyer of Sauk county. His chief political feat was accomplished when he was beaten by 200 votes for congress by Congressman J. W. Babcock, when Sauk county was in the old Third district. Congressman Babcock was then one of the strongest republicans in the state, and Sauk county was the chief republican unit in Wisconsin.

RED CROSS BOXES FOR BORDER TO START RIGHT AWAY

Red Cross supplies from La Crosse will be started for the local militia on the border within a few days, it was announced this morning by Mrs. Harry Colman, chairman of the supply section of the local chapter. A request has been sent to commanders of the local companies, for information as to the needs of the troops, and the answer is expected at once.

Miss Clara Jung, of the Barron store, has been placed in charge of packing and shipping supplies to the border. Mrs. Colman today said that all supplies to be sent to the boys should be left with Miss Jung.

Mrs. Colman appealed this morning for contributions of material and money for the use of the supply section. Contributions of money will be received by Miss Frances Sill, treasurer of the section.

PETROGRAD SAYS AUSTRIAN DROP BACK IN HURRY

Czar's Troops Advance Twelve Miles Since Thursday to Take Brody

CITY ENEMY FIELD BASE

Head of Railway Running to Lemberg and Capture Menaces Positions at Kovel

PETROGRAD, July 29.—General Brusiloff has resumed his offensive and thrown back the Teutonic line on the whole Kovel front from the Rovch railway to Brody, the war office announced today.

By an audacious thrust, General Lezczicki has thrown the enemy back in the direction of Stanislav to south of the Dniester," the statement continued.

Further big advance of the Grand Duke Nicholas' forces in the Caucasus was reported.

BERLIN, July 29.—"The enemy succeeded in penetrating our lines in the region of Trysten, causing us to give up our advanced positions held beyond the Stockhod river," the German war office announced today, relative to the Russian thrust at Kovel.

PETROGRAD, July 29.—Brody has been captured and Kovel is rapidly being enveloped from the south as the Russian armies advance unceasingly against the Austrians in Galicia. Capture of Brody, military experts pointed out here today, gives the czar's forces an opportunity to improve their thrust northward toward Kovel. Meanwhile it was believed here today the czar's troops are forcing onward toward Lemberg.

An evidence of the precipitate character of the Austrian retreat before the Russian offense is given in the fact that on Thursday the Russians were twelve miles from Brody and on Saturday occupation of the town was announced.

Petrograd eagerly awaited full word today of the details of Brody's investment. It was regarded as certain that a considerable quantity of booty fell into the hands of the city's conquerors since Brody had been an Austrian field base and announcement of capture of a large number of prisoners was likewise expected. From Brody on, it was pointed out here today, the Russian army of invasion into Galicia will have the advantage of a railroad in the movement against Lemberg.

SEEK SUCCESSOR OF DR. D. C. JONES OF 1ST PRESBYTERIAN

Following the morning service at the First Presbyterian church Sunday the committee to which has been delegated the duty of selecting a successor to Dr. D. C. Jones, will meet and organize. The committee, which was named at a Congregational meeting Wednesday evening at which the members voted to accede to Dr. Jones' request that the presbytery be asked for his release, is composed of the following members:

W. H. Sanders, R. G. MacDonald, W. E. Walker, George H. Gordon, Ole Elbertson, A. S. Farnham, D. G. McMillan, W. L. Smith, F. H. Seefeld, A. Patterson, Harry Leitold, H. J. Cunitz, A. M. Brayton; Messdames George H. Gordon, Edward Cronon, I. F. Cooper; Misses Effie Brandt, Bessy Slothower.

Subsequently to the congregational meeting there was held a meeting of the session at which a committee of three was named to draft and present suitable resolutions of appreciation for the splendid work done by Dr. Jones in La Crosse. A number of applications for the pulpit have been received.

MILITIAMEN PUT IN COMMAND OF SUPPLY TRAINS

Regulars Recalled from Service on Line to Expedition Into Mexican Territory

COLUMBUS, N. M., July 29.—Facilities for hauling supplies to the American expedition in Mexico still were being increased Friday. Fifty truck drivers from Chicago and a train load of new motor trucks were unloaded at the base camp here during the night.

Captains of sixteen motor trains are being withdrawn for duty in the quartermaster's corps. They are being replaced by lieutenants from the Massachusetts and the New Mexico militia organizations.

Following heavy rains in this region the temperature dropped below last night at any time since March. Militiamen sleeping on the ground scurried for extra blankets.

FARRAR INTERPRETS INSPIRING NATIONAL SONG OF AMERICA

Caruso, Gadsby, Gluck, McCormack, Kreisler, Schumann-Heink and Others Provide Splendid Program For Home

One of the features of the new list of Victor Records for August which is certain to arouse considerable enthusiasm, is the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by Geraldine Farrar. Not for years, perhaps have the inspiring verses of Key been so full of significance for Americans as they are today. As rendered by the American prima donna the full beauty of the song which expresses the spirit of the nation is disclosed and accentuated. Miss Farrar, an American of Americans, fuses patriotism and reverence with perfection of tone and method. Her rendition is truly thrilling.

A New Coloratura Soprano Mabel Garrison, the brilliant young soprano whose marked success on the concert platform and on tour with the Chicago Symphony orchestra was followed by finished work with the Metropolitan opera forces, has been engaged to make records exclusively for the Victor. Miss Garrison is a native of Baltimore. She received her early musical training in the Peabody institute, afterwards studying with Oscar Saenger. For her first records she has chosen the brilliant "Doll Song" from Offenbach's Tales of Hoffman and the beautiful old "Erminie Lullaby." The "Doll Song" especially affords Miss Garrison opportunity to display her wonderful talent as a coloratura artist.

There is considerable contrast between the August contribution of John McCormack and the record made by the famous tenor in July. Last month a delicate little love song, this month the noble "Prize Song" from Die Meistersinger. The famous tenor brings fine vocal power to supplement a freedom of treatment in this song, and the Wagner masterpiece is rendered with the real distinction which it deserves.

Both Kreisler and Zimbalist contribute again to the enjoyment of the big Victor family. The first named gives "The Old Refrain," a delightful little melody arranged by the celebrated violinist from an old Viennese folk-song. Zimbalist shows his skill in an adaptation for the violin of Tschakowsky's "Autumn Song," and is splendidly supported by the orchestra.

Introducing a Fine 'Cellist Few 'Cellists have received such prompt recognition at the hands of American audiences as Hans Kindler, the young soloist of the Philadelphia orchestra, who is another star secured to make records exclusively for the Victor. Although only 24 years of age, Kindler has had a brilliant career. He introduces himself by playing Saint-Saens' "The Swan" and Rubenstein's "Melody in W." Hurtado Brothers Royal Marimba band delights by the brilliancy with which it renders the Lucia Sextette and the chorus and grand march from the second act of "Aida." The McKee Trio sings again with "In the Gloaming," and "Supplication," a new meditation by Mabel McKee.

Pryor's band and Conway's band submit new offerings. The former contributes this month a humorous treatment of "The Girl I Left Behind Me," and a parody on "The Arkansas Traveler." Conway's organization is heard in a paraphrase of "The Lorelei" and in the Spanish section of Moszkowski's "From Foreign Ports." Olga Munkacsy's Hungarian orchestra conveys in "The Old Gypsy" and a waltz number the peculiar fascination of Hungarian music when played by Hungarians fully steeped in its spirit. This should prove one of the most popular records of the month.

Realizing the popularity of Hawaiian numbers the Victor has added an excellent double record this month in which the full effectiveness of the native instruments is demonstrated. Helen, Louise and Frank Ferera give the "Song of Hawaii" and "Hawaiian Hula Medley" on Hawaiian guitars with remarkable effectiveness. The Venetian Trio offer a blending of violin and cello with the harp in two delightful numbers full of atmospheric appeal.

That the dance craze is dying out is not borne out by the experience of the Victor. While the attendance at dances in restaurants and other public places may have fallen off, there can be no doubt that dancing in the home is as popular as ever. For August, the Victor Military band submits six One-Steps and Fox-Trots including such medleys as "Arrah On, I'm Gonna Go Back to Oregon," "Loading Up the Mandy Lee," and "Johnny Get a Girl." The "Ole Virginny One-Step" is another number which is certain to give satisfaction.

Harry Lauder and Nora Bayes are to the fore again this month. The contribution of the great Scotch humorist is one of the greatest hits of his career. "It's Nice to Get Up in the Mornin'," "It's Nice to Lie in Bed." The popularity of this character study in the twelve-inch list made its reproduction for the wider field of the ten-inch record inevitable. Anyone who has ever seen Nora Bayes on the stage will certainly be able to visualize her in "Hello Hawaii, How Are You?" and "When Old Bill Bailey Flays the Ukalele," for these two songs are sung as only Nora Bayes could sing them. The esprit and magnetism of the clever comedienne are conveyed in every line of each selection.

New Singers of Popular Songs Twenty more popular songs are added to the Victor list, including the topical hit, "I Sent My Wife to the Thousand Isles." New singers are introduced in M. J. O'Connell and the Avon Comedy Four. Mr. O'Connell is a clear-voiced tenor whose singing of "I've Got a Sweet Tooth Bothering Me," is sure to be popular. The Avon Comedy Four offers "My Mother's Rosary" and "Yaaka Hula Hickety Dula," one of the popular Hawaiian love songs of the day.

For the children Elizabeth Wheeler offers two groups of Mother Goose songs, and Elsie Baker and Olive Kline are excellent in the new records of some Gaynor classics. A vocal record which is "different" is made by William Sterling Battis who recites two of the most humorous selections from the works of Mark Twain—the story of the Genoaese Guide and the Innocents, and the labor-diverting methods by which Tom Sawyer has his Aunt Polly's fence painted. Kitty Cheatham also furnishes two selections which are likewise in demand by those who recognize the finish of her work as an entertainer. The first of these is August E. Steadson's "Love's Lullaby," and the second is a recitation of Archibald Sullivan's "Little Gray Lamb."

The Tuskegee Institute Singers contribute two typical examples of the old camp meeting hymns in "The Old Time Religion" and the "Heaven Song." The "Songs of the Past" offered for August by the Victor Mixed Chorus are a collection of Neapolitan favorites, and a group of Spanish ballads which give scope for exceptionally fine work by the chorus. John Barnes Walls pleases with several humorous numbers—quaint trifles, cleverly rendered and clearly reproduced.

Some time ago the Victor Light Opera company was obliged to make a second medley of songs from "The Mikado." New records have been made of the two parts, "A Wandering Minstrel" has been added, and the whole combined as a double-faced record. This gives thirteen numbers from the most tuneful of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas—a really remarkable offering.

Bijou

PEGGY HYLAND, noted English actress of the speaking stage, is closing an engagement in "Saint and Sinners" at the Bijou today. The picture is a winner, judging from the crowds at the Third street theater. Unusual Photographs are also on the program for the week-end.

Blanche Sweet Returns

band," a much-talked-about Paramount production. Miss Sweet is supported by Theodore Roberts and Tom Forman, and an all-star photo drama cast. Burton Holmes' travel pictures, visiting the "Sultan of Zulu," bring an enjoyable ending to the program—to run at the Bijou for three days.

Gail Is With World

Gail Kane, one of George Cohan's most celebrated stars, who made a tremendous success in "The Seven Keys to Baldpate," is coming to the Bijou on Wednesday in the World-Brady production of "Paying the Price," a story of the army and navy. Irving Cummings is in the cast; the United States government co-operated with Brady in making the pictures, allowing the company to use the destroyers Wadsworth, several torpedoes and other navy equipment.

"Gutter Magdalene"

"The Gutter Magdalene," with Fanny Ward in the leading role, and supported by Jack Dean and Billy Elmer, will be the Bijou attraction for the latter part of the week to come. It deals with the Salvation army. Miss Ward's work in "The Cheat" and "Tennessee's Partner," brought immense popularity in La Crosse.

A few features coming to the Bijou in the near future are "The Evil Thereof," with Frank Losee; "Miss Petticoats," with Alice Brady; "The Making of Magdalene," with Edna Goodrich, and Marguerite Clark in "Silks and Satins."

Majestic

A DELIGHTFUL MIXTURE of fun and Fairbanks—Douglas Fairbanks—entitled "Flirting With Fate," features tomorrow's photoplay program at the Majestic.

Fairbanks, the man with "the irresistible smile," is cast in unusual Fine Arts production, in which contemplated suicide is the central theme. Fairbanks treats the subject in a snappy fashion, and leaves an audience in a feeling that "It's good to be alive." Billie Burke, in her ninth chapter of "Gloria's Romance," called "Tangled Fates," is in a sorry predicament. Majestic audiences are growing more pleased with the big serial hit as it advances. There is also a Keystone with an unusually funny plot at the Main street house.

"The Disciple"

William S. Hart, the "bad man" of movies, and a Triangle actor with one of the strongest personalities on the silent stage, comes back to the Majestic on Tuesday and Wednesday in "The Disciple." Hart scored a wonderful success with the production in La Crosse some months ago. It is the story of a young minister who arrives at a mining town with his family. Hart is the minister, whose wife elopes with "Doc," the owner of the western town's dance hall. Then William S. gets into his best known action. The picture leaves dealing with society life and the drug menace, wiped out almost entirely by a recent federal law, will be the Wednesday attraction at the Dome. Edward Brennan and Grace Valentine are featured. The film was made under the direction of John W. Noble.

"Black Fear"—Metro

Harry Westayer is to be seen at the Dome Thursday and Friday in "Wives of the Rich," and "The Trail of Danger," a new episode of "Hazard of Helen," series of serial pictures is a welcomed attraction for the two days. Besides, Kalem offers a comedy called "From the Altar to the Halter."

WEATHER U.S. Weather Bureau

Sunrise tomorrow, 4:51 a. m. Sunset tomorrow, 7:32 p. m. Yesterday's Temperatures High, 98; low, 74; precipitation, 0.

For Wisconsin: Generally fair and continued warm tonight. Sunday partly cloudy followed by somewhat cooler in west and north portions.

For Minnesota: Partly cloudy to night; slightly cooler north and west portions. Sunday generally fair; somewhat cooler east portion.

For Iowa: Generally fair with continued high temperature tonight. Sunday partly cloudy; slightly cooler west and south portions.

Weather Conditions

Fair weather prevails this morning in all sections and with but little cloudiness. Excessively high temperatures continue in the central districts and have spread to include the upper lake region. Maximum temperatures of 100 and 102 degrees were recorded yesterday in South Dakota, Iowa and at Green Bay and Marquette. The 102 degrees at Green Bay is the highest temperature in 20 years. The temperature is slightly lower in the north Atlantic states and from Montana and North Dakota northward into the Canadian northwest.

The pressure continues high over the eastern states; it is lowest in Manitoba and the southwest.

Generally fair weather is indicated for tonight and Sunday with not quite so high temperature Sunday.

Out of the Mouths of Kids

All through tea Tommy sat silent, so silent that his parents at last began to feel alarmed. But the son and heir was only doing some thinking. "Pa," said he presently, "do school teachers get paid?" "Of course they do, sonny," replied the father. "Then it ain't fair," burst out the small boy indignantly. "Why should the teachers get paid when us kids do all the work?"

Porch Lamps for Street Lighting Having the porches in a suburban resident section lighted up at night adds so much to the attractive appearance of the streets that in many places it has been advocated as a civic duty. It remains for Ashland, Oregon, to provide electricity for porch lighting at public expense. The citizens are supplied with attractive lamps at a minimum cost and the electric current for their illumination is paid for by the city. It is turned on each evening at the proper time and instead of having patches of light from the street lamps at the corners the entire streets are illuminated with a soft radiance coming from the porches that border it.

THE COMING OF THE EVENING STAR

No matter whether the summer sun has disappeared behind the next brick block or the mighty ranges of the Sierra Nevada, or has gone in glory beyond the surging sky line that marks the Pacific's or the prairie's verge, there is the same eternal mystery in that hushing hour of twilight and coolness. After the day's glare the earth itself has become for us that great rock in a weary land which to the prophet Isaiah was the symbol of his king to be. In its shadow we will rest. Now, as of old, that kindly zone of twilight has come to us on its unceasing mission across the face of our world, a daily blessing made near and visible to those who will see, and above it shines the evening star. Before this presence one's thoughts, at least, turn home and the familiar things of life are both dear and strange. Flowers close drowsily; birds are stirring to their rest or waking to renewed life according to their kind; and every tree down the street or hillside is rustling its countless leaves in that vesper music of the little breezes which a man's heart ought to be wise enough to understand. Supper smoke is abroad on those same breezes and the children are somewhat quieter. And in that hour the everlasting wonder is renewed: what have we done to deserve a world so fair, what goodness has made it possible for us? Despite the tumult in which we confuse our lives and the wrongs that blot us, this hour comes with its healing peace and will come throughout the years. Surely it is for us to have some of our days so lived that they will be worthy of the evening star, peaceful in the shadows that follow it, and confident of the morning beyond.—Collier's Weekly.

NAILING THE LIARS

Mr. Dan Coleman, border correspondent of the Milwaukee Sentinel, recently wired his paper a detailed exposure of the "fake" journalism through which the militia camps in Texas have been pictured as torture camps in which sun and disease conspired to make "Andersonville" appear like a summer evening outing.

Today Major Dan S. MacArthur has from his son, Philip S. MacArthur, Wisconsin Field Hospital, San Antonio, a letter from which we quote the following:

It is hot here all right enough, but IT ISN'T OPPRESSIVE AS IN LA CROSSE. All that stuff about 180 in the shade, men's feet burned, baking in the tents, IS ALL BOSH.

Lieut. A. A. Fix, of the Supply company, writes to a Tomah correspondent a letter which categorically denies sensational misrepresentations, in which he says of our own boys:

The Third regiment is in better condition and has better meals than they had while at Camp Douglas.

Misrepresentation of the condition of the men at the front, sent broadcast by disreputable writers and publishers to make mothers and wives worry, is the most pusillanimous of yellow journalism. More, it is the antithesis of patriotism, for it tends to deter enlistment of men now much needed in the service of Uncle Sam. That much of it is put forth for that sinister purpose by men who wish to embarrass the administration is probable. Newspaper liberty is most desirable, and every publisher hates a censorship, but since there are crooks in the business, we must commend a censorship that, while giving reasonable freedom of utterance, shall eliminate lies from "war correspondence".

AGAIN, "TAXING AMERICAN ENTERPRISE"

During one week a New York City firm sold 100,000 head of poultry. Investigators found that the crops of the birds bought from these dealers were stuffed with cement, gravel, oyster shells, and sand, one specimen yielding fifteen ounces of paving material. The firm was fined $50. Poultry was selling for around twenty cents a pound. Does food adulteration pay?—Exchange.

Estimating four ounces to the hen, the conservativeness of which is intimated by the sample given above in which fifteen ounces of pseudo "crop" were excavated, we should have 25,000 pounds of debris, which at twenty cents the pound brought $5,000. A fine of $50 for stealing $5,000 should be rated as an income tax instead of deterrent. However, it may be objected to entirely, as a "tax on thrift".

GOOD LUCK. "BIG FELLOW"

Tom McDonough always seems to be on the firing line. He has faced heavy ordnance in the hands of many bad men, and always his nerve has some way taken him through. How vexing, then, it must have been for the "big fellow", as his friends call him, to be shot by an old man using a small revolver, and to have the vexing little missile inflict a serious wound. It is the good news today that Tom will recover easily, but nursing a bullet wound at 98 in the shade is at best a trial. Several thousand people join us in hoping shortly to see "Big Tom" McDonough "on the job" soon, and ready as ever to look unflinchingly into the business end of a "44".

SCOUR OUT THE CITY

La Crosse should be given a thorough scouring. Despite the flushing that has been done, there is still in the town the stench from millions of river bugs that have been winnowed under street lights and in store windows for several mornings. The putrefaction of this mass of animal matter, in the record heat of this period, can not fail to be potential for disaster. The city should undertake the flushing of the city upon a scale and with thoroughness never before necessary, nor need quick lime, and other disinfectants be spared if, in the opinion of the health department, that seems a wise precaution.

The La Follette amendment appropriating $50 per month to married men in the militia service now mustered into the federal army, has passed the senate. It is now up to the house and to the president. Every consideration of wisdom and justice commends this measure. It means that while men are bearing the burden of the country's defense, the country will at least share the domestic burdens they have laid down in the interest of patriotism. There may be exigencies in which defense of country calls men to neglect their families, but no such condition now exists. Senator Gore's opposition to the measure was blind.

THE TRIBUNE'S DAILY TRAVELETTE

(By Niksah)

FALLING WATER

The chances are that you never heard of Falling Water, West Virginia, and that you will never go there; yet the city of Falling Water is well worth knowing, even though it is shown on very few maps, and hard to notice as you go by on the turnpike.

The most important feature of Falling Water is the store, which is also the post office, and likewise the residence of the postmaster, and also the home of the storekeeper, who likewise runs the post office. In front of the store and postoffice are some of the finest, largest and most luxuriantly umbrageous shade trees in all West Virginia, and during the summer months these shade trees are often the gathering place of all the wit and wisdom, the culture, beauty, the eloquence and dignity of Falling Water—to wit, namely, of the seven people who live there.

When the weather grows cold, there is a large sheet iron stove inside of the store and post office at Falling Water, and four cracker boxes and a folding chair and lots of room on the counters; so that society in Falling Water is very little affected by the weather.

Two principal industries at Falling Water are fishing for bass and raising water cress. The Potomac river slides silently right through the city—a broad clear, slow-moving stream with big sycamores and elms along its banks shading the water, so that on a hot day a man can often fish without getting in the sun. There are not enough bass to make the fishing commercially profitable, but there are enough to make good sport when they are biting; and there is nothing unduly mercenary in the spirit of Falling Water anyhow. In fact, there is quite a devil-may-care and sporting element. Some of the leading citizens have been known repeatedly to go fishing on Sunday.

Several little runs or races or branches come percolating down through the wooded hills and pop over a twenty-foot bluff into the potomac near Falling Water. These have given the city its name, and are also the chief source of its income, for they have been dammed and water cress has been permitted and even encouraged to grow in the resultant ponds. Sometimes as much as three and a half barrels of cress per day are shipped from Falling Water. Even this thriving industry does little to disturb the prevailing calm, however. The plashing lullaby of falling water is usually the only sound that can be heard.

Girl Got Hit

"My wife managed to drive a nail today without hitting her thumb."

"How was that?"

"She inveigled the hired girl into holding the nail."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Good Reason

A woman from the city was spending the summer in a small town, and one day, while doing her marketing, she asked the butcher how he happened to choose his business. He hesitated a moment, and then:

"Well, I don't know," he answered, "but I always was fond of animals."

NEARLY WILD WITH BURNING ITCHING

Eczema, From Hands to Elbows One Mass. Could Not Put Hands in Water. Could Not Sleep.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My daughter was poisoned by salt and it turned into eczema and from her hands to her elbows was one mass of red, burning, itching eruptions. It began with a rash which was of a burning itching nature that at times she was nearly wild. For weeks she could not put her hands in water and she could not sleep."

"She suffered intensely for several weeks and I tried wringing towels out of hot water and putting a rubber sheet across her, but she wasn't helped. The doctor said to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I did and the itching and burning left her, and I used four boxes of Cuticura Ointment together with the Cuticura Soap and she was completely healed." PRUDENCE OF THE PARSONAGE

By ETHEL HUESTON Copyright 1915 The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"You look like a creature from another world, Prue," she said. "If Professor Rayburn has any sense in his bones, he will fall dead in love with you—bugs or no bugs!"

"People do not have sense in their bones, Fairy, and—and—shall I say Professor, or just plain Mister?"

"Professor, I suppose—every one calls him professor."

"Then I shall say Mister," said Prudence. "It will be so hard to enjoy myself if I keep remembering he teaches bugs! I might as well be at school, I shall say Mister."

And she did say "Mister," and she said it so sweetly, and looked up into Professor Rayburn's face so brightly, and with happiness so evident and so girlish, that the staid professor felt a quick unaccountable throbbing down somewhere beneath his coat. He did look eager! There was no doubt of it. And he looked at Prudence, continuously.

"Just like ordinary men, isn't he?" whispered Fairy to Eugene Babler—called "Babbie," for short and for humiliation—for he enjoyed the reputation of being a "talker" even among college men!

The three young couples struck off briskly down the road, creekward, and Prudence followed sedately with her professor.

"Fairy says it was perfectly disgusting of me to tell you I didn't know anything about bugs," she said comfortably. "But I thought maybe you were one of those professors who like one thing so much they can't be interested in anything else. And I wanted to warn you. But I guess you aren't that kind, after all!"

"Oh, no, indeed," he assured her fervently, looking deep into her blue eyes. "I like bugs, it is true. But really I like other things, one thing at least, much better."

"Is it a riddle?" she inquired. "Am I supposed to guess?"

"It isn't a riddle, but you may guess. Think hard, now! It's a serious matter. Please don't say 'food.'"

"If I get below seventy will I be put down a grade?" she asked. Then with intense solemnity, "I guess girls."

They laughed together, youthfully. "You are right," he said.

And with a sigh of relief, Prudence answered, "That's the first time I ever got a hundred in anything in my life. I was very much accustomed to eighties when I was in school. I am very common and unbrilliant," she assured him. "Fairy says you are perfectly horribly clever."

She glanced up when she heard his exclamation, and laughed at his rueful face. "Oh, that isn't Fairy's expression. She thinks brilliant and clever people are just adorable. It is only I who think them horrible." Even Prudence could see that this didn't help matters. "I—I do not mean that," she stammered. "I am sure you are very nice indeed, and we are going to be good friends, are we not? But I am such a duncie myself that I am afraid of real clever people. They are so superior. And so uninteresting, and—oh, I do not mean that either. Then Prudence laughed at her predicament. "I may as well give up. What I really mean is that you are so nice and friendly and interesting, that I can hardly believe you are so clever. You are the nicest smart person I ever saw—except my own family, I mean."

She smiled up at him deliciously. "Does that make it square?"

"More than square," he said. "You are too complimentary. But the only thing that really counts today is whether we are going to be real good friends, as you suggested. We are, aren't we? The very best and closest of friends?"

"Yes," agreed Prudence, dimpling. "I like men to be my friends—nice men, I mean. But it isn't always safe. So many start out to be good friends, and then want to be silly. So a girl has to be very careful. But it's perfectly safe with you, and so we can be the very best of friends. I won't need to be watchful for bad symptoms."

"Do you think me so unmanly that I couldn't fall in love?" he asked, and his voice was curious, as though she had hurt him.

"Oh, of course, you'll fall in love," laughed Prudence. "All nice men do. But not with me—that was what I meant. I couldn't imagine a buggy professor—oh, I beg your pardon! But the twins are so silly and disrespectful, and they thought it was such a joke that I should even look at a professor of biology that they began calling you the buggy professor. But they do not mean any harm by it, not the least in the world. They're such nice sweet girls—but—young, you know. Are your feelings hurt?" she asked anxiously.

"Not a bit! I think the twins and I will be tremendously good friends. I'm quite willing to be known as the buggy professor. But you were trying to explain why I shouldn't fall in love with you. I suppose you mean that you do not want me to."

"Oh, not that at all," she hastened to assure him. Then she stopped. "Yes," she said honestly, "that is true, too. But that isn't what I was trying to say. I was just saying that no one realizes any more than I how perfectly impossible it would be for a clever, grown-up, brilliant professor to fall in love with such an idiot as I am. That's all, I meant it for a compliment," she added, seeing he was not pleased.

He smiled, but it was a sober smile. "You said it was true that you

NEWS NOTES MOVIELAND

"You can't make photo plays as you make shoes. The yardstick and so-called efficiency engineer constitute the greatest menace to the artistic development of the motion picture."

Albert Capellani, director general of the new Clara Kimball Young Film corporation, has this to say of the motion picture industry in general. He even advances the argument, unique among present-day directors, that the length of a feature picture should be governed by the story it tells and not by the arbitrary five-reel rule promulgated by somebody and adopted by everybody.

"You might just as well tell a novelist how many words he must write his next story in, or a painter how many brushfuls of paint he must use on his next canvas," declares Mr. Capellani.

Lillian Walker

In Western Story

Lillian Walker's latest vehicle is "Hesper of the Mountains," a drama of the west, in which the work of Ewart Overton also stands out.

Miss Walker is seen as a luxury loving and cultured miss of the east, who, when forced to go west with her sickly brother, expresses a hearty dislike for the country, its customs, and its rough, uncultured men. Raymond, a ranch foreman, loses his heart to her, but when she refuses to encourage him, he goes off to another town to try his hand at prospecting. Chance brings her to the same town, and when in the midst of an uprising of the miners, with his life and property constantly in danger, Raymond remains cool, and finally settles the disturbance, the girl sees her estimate of western men was erroneous. When Raymond next calls to plead his suit, his task is an easy one.

Bessie Barriscale

In Kay-Bee Play

Bessie Barriscale, Ince star, is enjoying a brief rest following the completion of the Irish comedy drama in which she was working for the last month. Soon she is to begin as the star of a new Triangle-Kay-Bee feature, the scenes of which are laid in the poetic Blue Ridge mountains.

did not wish me to be—fond of you. Why? Don't you like me then, after all?"

Now, he realized that this was a perfectly insane conversation, but for the life of him, he couldn't help it. Prudence was so alluring, and the sky was so warmly blue, the sunshine so mild and hazy, and the roadside so gloriously gay with colors! Who could have sense on such a day, with such a girl as this?

"Oh, I do like you very much, indeed," declared Prudence. "It's a big relief, too, for I didn't expect to—oh, I beg your pardon again, but—well, I was scared when Fairy told me how remarkable you are. I didn't want to disgrace the parsonage, and I knew I would. But—why, the reason I do not want you to fall in love with me—that's very different from being fond of me. I do want you to be that—but when people fall in love, they get married. I'm not going to get married, so it would be silly to fall in love, wouldn't it?"

He laughed heartily at the matter-of-factness with which this nineteen-year-old girl disposed of love and marriage. "Why aren't you going to be married?" he inquired, foolishly happy, and showing more foolishness than happiness, just as we all do on such occasions.

Bathing Beach Wanted Considerable agitation among the citizens for the establishment of a bathing pavilion and beach at the river is being heard. At the special meeting of the city council held on Thursday evening the following resolution was presented by John Peacock:

"Resolved, that the increasing number of visitors to the city of Prairie du Chien and the general progress and advancement of the city demands more facilities for health and amusement and the moral and physical welfare of our own citizens and visitors, and that one of the greatest natural advantages of the city well adapted to furnish health and amusement is the river front which has been almost entirely neglected.

"That nearly every city and village in the state which has any kind of a river or lake front have pavilions and beaches for bathing purposes.

"That a bathing beach provided with the accommodations that are ordinarily supplied by any little summer resort in the state will be a great attraction and drawing card for visitors to the city as there is no more healthful exercise and amusement than bathing.

"Wherefore it is further resolved, that this council be appointed to act in conjunction with the executive committee of the city club in investigating and reporting to this council at its next regular meeting the practicability of establishing a suitable bathing beach with a pavilion for dressing at some place along the river front.

The committee appointed to investigate is composed of Aldermen Peacock, Karnopp and Keiser.

Verse and Reverse

TO JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY
Well, good-bye Jim; take care yourself;
You've crossed the great divide,
There with that dear old sweetheart,
There on the other side.

A tear in Orphan Annie's eye,
A lump in Sier's throat,
An' Jim, they're quite a raft of us
That's in the same old boat.

Well, good-bye, Jim; take care yourself;
Yer dead, but still yer'll live
In human hearts as long as God
Has human life to give.
You belonged to Him, Jim, anyway,
An' you was only lent
A nation's everlasting love,
Shall be yer monument.

Episcopalians Interested in Summer Conferences

The Episcopal church, and Episcopal church women, are reported as taking such interest in summer conferences as they, or any other religious body in any one season, have ever taken before. At the conferences in charge of the missionary education movement Episcopal women outnumber all others. The same is reported from conferences, several of them new this year, called to study
Sunday school work. Erie, Sewanee, Blairtown, Raleigh, Geneva, Gambler and Gladstone, N. J., are among the new summer meetings, or at least new within a year or a little longer.

CHURCH NEWS

Churches on the Job Along the Border

Churches are doing along the Mexican border a clever bit of permanent Christian work. National guard chaplains now on the border are, for the most part, leaders in their respective church plans at home, and are not exclusively identified with the army to the extent that regular army chaplains are. Being on the border with troops, they are exerting themselves to help struggling missions in the border settlements. They are preaching to the people, but more than that, they are sending back home funds to provide permanent buildings and getting single congregations north and east to take support of missionaries for a year or more.
From Brownsville west to Nogales, Arizona, hardly a town is not utilizing chaplains to strengthen permanent Christian work. Missionary societies in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Cincinnati are co-operating. At Columbus, New Mexico, two chapels are projected.
At Spofford, Eagle Pass and Laredo, Texas, an Episcopal bishop, Methodist district superintendent, and Baptist missionary superintendent are on the ground, co-operating with ministers from the north, there because the troops are on the border.
It is said that Columbus will profit much.

Celebrate Birth of Reformation

Official announcement is made by the two Reformed bodies in America of the celebration by them of the birth of the Reformation four hundred years ago. These bodies are the Dutch and the German, the one strongest in New York, New Jersey and Michigan, the other in Pennsylvania. The two bodies furthermore fix upon October as the time, and state that they hope that the joint celebration may advance their plans for organic union, now well started.
About 400,000 people are the numbers in both bodies. Historically they come from Switzerland, the Rhenish provinces of Germany, and Holland, and hold to the Heidelberg confession.

THE HASKIN LETTER

THE FARM MARKET PROBLEM

By Frederic J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 29.—

A few days ago President Wilson signed the rural credits bill, and a plan to meet one of the greatest American agricultural problems was formally launched. There still remains another question which must be solved before American agriculture is really on a sound and logical business basis. There is an important bill, now in the committee stage of its life, designed to answer this question by means of an official organization of all the 6,000,000 farmers in the United States.

The rural credits bill is designed to supply the farmer with cheap longtime money, which will put him in a position to develop his land properly and own it when it is developed. But the financial problem is only one of the farmer's problems. The problem of efficient production is another one; but in meeting this the American farmer has the assistance of the federal department of agriculture, perhaps the most elaborate and efficient organization in the world for the study of problems of production.
The farmer's third problem, however,
brings up another story.

It is the problem of marketing, of finding a buyer, and it is the concensus of opinion that in this respect American agriculture is in a bad way, both absolutely and as compared to other nations. The bill introduced into house and senate proposes to remedy this state of affairs by the creation of a new and elaborate organization which will link every farmer and every buyer.

It is hardly worth while to cite cases from the shelves available where the consumer has paid fancy prices for some article of food while the farmer fifty miles away had the same article by the bushel rotting on the ground. The problem is being attacked from a dozen different sides by local organizations, by cities, counties and sometimes by states,
but the evil of a greater or lesser degree still persists. There is no blame to be attached to any particular class.
The fault is seen to lie primarily with the system, and the system is wrong because it is blind and wasteful.

The situation may be summed up by saying that the consumer pays too much for farm products, and the farmer gets too little for them. To lay the blame on the middlemen is an easy but erroneous way of placing the responsibility. The middlemen for the most part perform indispensable services, and as for their exorbitant profits, you do not see the corner grocer touring across the continent in his limousine. The real fault rests with a system that works in the dark, that dumps potatoes onto a market already flooded with potatoes, that ships carrots to Philadelphia and turnips to Boston when Boston wants carrots and Philadelphia wants turnips.

No one is arguing that the system is not wrong; and critics are agreed that what is lacking is a good system of reports by which the producer can find the best market of the moment, not in his county or his state, but in the United States of America. The California Fruit Growers' association is often cited as an example of how an organization of this sort can function. The association may ship a car of oranges to Chicago. While the car is crossing Kansas the news comes that oranges are off in Chicago and up in Cincinnati. The destination of the car is changed by telegraph. Instead of going to Chicago it goes to Cincinnati. The people of Cincinnati get oranges at a lower price than they would have otherwise, and the orange grower gets a better price for his fruit.

Something like this, but much broader and more comprehensive than this, is the goal set by most of our market reformers. The bill now before congress, introduced in the senate by Senator Shappard and in the house by Mr. Goodwin, proposes to solve the problem in this fashion:
It provides for the establishment of a national chamber of agriculture. This chamber is to consist at first of nine members appointed by the president, at least six of whom are practical farmers. The national chamber would be organized as a corporation in the District of Columbia, over which congress has direct jurisdiction, and as such would operate in all the different states.

The real unit of the national chamber, however, as designed in the bill, would consist of the farmers of each individual township in the United States. When twenty farmers in a township should organize, they would be granted a charter by the national chamber.
Each member of the local organization is to have one vote, and each local organization is to have its own officers, and levy what fees and dues its constitution may provide.

When four or more townships in a given county have organized their local chamber, they are to get together and apply for a charter for a county chamber, which the national chamber will grant. This county chamber will in turn maintain as much of a staff as it finds necessary and profitable. The county chamber is made up of delegates elected one from each of the local chambers.

As soon as one-third of the counties in a single state have organized county chambers, they may apply for a state chamber, which the national chamber will grant. The state chamber is to be composed of one delegate from each county chamber. Just as the county chamber is drawn from the townships, when twenty states have organized state chambers, the national chamber will automatically come into being, national officers will be elected, the officials appointed by the president will retire in their favor, and the whole will be a democratic organization on a purely elective basis.

What will this somewhat elaborate national chamber, with all its state, county and township divisions and their respective staffs actually do? How do its designers intend to function? Take a simple case.

John Stevens, a fruit grower, has seven barrels of apples for sale. He does not want to ship blindly to some nearby city, and he cannot read fitty market reports a day and continue to prune his apple trees. He tells the secretary of his township chamber about his apples and lets the matter drop from his mind.

One provision of the bill is that all units of the national chamber shall "provide for the employment of the card index, the telephone and the telegraph." The local secretary looks in the card index and sees if anybody in the township wants apples. Perhaps not. Very well; he telephones concerning the apples of John Stevens to the county secretary. This official in turn sees whether anybody in the county wants John's apples. Perhaps not. Very well. He refers them to the state secretary, who can if necessary turn to the national secretary, and by morning the whole of the United States of America has been canvassed to find a market for seven barrels of apples.

In this simplest of possible cases you have the scheme of whole. The national chamber of agriculture is to get the farmer the best possible market by letting the whole country know what every part of the country wants to buy. The law of supply and demand is to be permitted to function freely. While the arrangement would assure the farmer of the best market price, it should also protect the consumer by relieving any local scarcity with its consequent inflation of prices.

The bill is based in large part on the investigations made by the American commission in Europe recently, and is approved by Mr. David Lubin, the American delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture. It is also endorsed by the National Association of Commissioners of Agriculture, a recent organization whose membership consists of the forty-eight state commissioners of agriculture, with Dr. Clarence J. Owens, who directed much of the work of the European investigation, as secretary.

The bill has been criticised for approaching the problem too exclusively from the producer's end, without sufficient provision for the convenience of the consumer, and also as not making sufficient use of state and local marketing organizations already existing, as well as of the bureau of agriculture in the department of agriculture. But while it may emerge from committee somewhat amended, it seems to have the vitality that assumes from committee somewhat amended, up for an early vote.

Piano's Effect on the Baby.

While visiting a friend and after putting the baby to sleep the little boy asked me to play the piano, and I said: "I'm afraid it will wake the baby." He answered: "No, it won't.
It just makes her go to sleep tighter."

Christian Endeavor

Topic for Sunday, July 30:

"How Missions are Blessing Our Nation"—Luke 19:41-48.

Have you ever thought of the good we get from sending missions to foreign lands, the blessings our nation receives by helping other countries that are in Christian need?
God has not let this great nation that has done so much to advance the cause of Christ in heathen lands go without its just reward. We receive the blessings in one way or another, as a nation or individually.
This is only to arouse thought on the topic. Think of these many blessings, speak of them in the meeting, and consider the topic from different viewpoints giving your ideas.

Special Summer Meetings

The First Presbyterian society, corner Sixth and King streets, meets in church parlors Sunday evening at 8:15 o'clock. Mrs. Millington, a lady who understands missions will conduct the meeting. A splendid special feature will be had this summer. No one need fear heat in our Endeavor meetings this summer and Endeavor this one. Nuf said! Come.
The North Presbyterian society, corner Avon and Logan streets,
meets at the church Sunday at 8:45
p. m., sharp. The meeting is led by Miss Ethel Yarrington. Our special feature this week requires you to be at the church promptly at 8:45 or you will be left. (Why?) Ask some one of the grand success of our future last week and you will want to come this Sunday.

Announcements

Our special features in the meetings Sunday evenings to make them cool, interesting and helpful will be continued through the month of August, each one being different.
The North side society is planning to have the famous C. E. consecration meeting called "In the Shadow of the Cross," August 6. This will prove very interesting to all. Attend one of our specials and you will not miss another.

At the executive committee meeting of the North side society Wednesday evening it was decided to hold our business meeting Tuesday, August first at the home of Miss Ethel Yarrington, 2400 Loomis street.

In the contest for attendance at Christian Endeavor and Evening church the Red side of the First Presbyterian society won with a total of 870 points. The contest was interesting and helpful.

SUGAR PRICES AND CANNING

It is estimated that half the housewives in the country have made up their minds to can no fruit this season on account of the high price of sugar. This decision has been reached in a haphazard way, without much logic or sense behind it, and it is up to the retail trade to do a little missionary work in favor of home canning. Most women use a maximum of a quart to a third of a pound of sugar in each quart jar of canned fruit. Now sugar is about three cents a pound above normal, and, assuming that a third of a pound is used in each quart jar, the additional cost for canning, brought about by the high price of sugar, is at most, only one cent per quart jar.

Few women analyze these figures. They merely say, "eleven pounds of sugar for a dollar? I can't afford to put up fruit at such prices," and they let it go at that. You are making a mistake.

Although English Government Has Made Provision for Them Many Are Feeling the Pinch of Poverty

LONDON, July 29.—Despite the provision the British government is supposed to make for the wives and families of its men at the front, an expose in the labor "Herald" today would indicate that some of England's women and children feel the pinch of poverty during wartime quite as much as thousands of American military men's wives and children feel it since their breadwinners have been called to the Mexican border.

The allegations concerning the alleged pension evils are attracting the attention not only of labor union, but of government officials. The Herald gives a long list of inadequate pensions.

UNCLE SAM READY
TO HELP HIS GIRLS
SECURE EMPLOYMENT

Recently Created National Employment Bureau for Women and Girls Now on a Working Basis

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Uncle Sam's all ready to help his women and girls get jobs.

Organization of the recently created Women's and Girls' division of the United States employment service of the bureau of immigration now is on a working basis, Commissioner-General of Immigration Caminetti announced here today.

Branches of this bureau have been established in all the leading cities of the country. They are in charge of women. Uncle Sam's investigation disclosed that women and girls don't like to deal with men when they go to an employment bureau, that's why.

The service stations will give special attention to the requests of women wage earners for work and to meeting the demand for female help in rural as well as urban communities.

If the woman wants to get into a certain kind of work but doesn't know enough about it to be efficient, the bureau nearest her home will provide her a vocational training course along that line and be hunting a job for her meantime.

FOUR HUNDRED WOMEN ARE BEARING ARMS FOR
"GOD AND THE CZAR"

It is stated on good authority that Russia has no fewer than four hundred women bearing arms "for God and the czar." One has even reached the rank of colonel in a Cossack regiment, while several others have won official recognition of some sort for bravery at the front, in the shape of the coveted Cross of St. George, which is the Russian iron cross. Women throughout Europe are doing man's work in factories and in the harvest field, but it is only in Russia that women by the hundreds have joined the armies, cutting off their long tresses and passing as men in the majority of cases, but being tolerated by the officers and men upon discovery and gradually being treated as heroines and fully accepted as they proved their valor on the field. These war heroines are not new to Russian history, and the ancient Russian ballads are full of the noble deeds of Russian maidens who defended their tribal homesteads against the savage bands of robbers operating in the northern wilds of Russia. The present feminine warriors come principally from the gymnasiums, or high schools, and are young girls. In the spy service of Russia women are also said to play a greater part than in any other country, women of the highest nobility and of the greatest culture and charm often engaging in the work as in a thrilling game.

Pessimist and Optimist.

The habitual pessimist is deservedly without honor even in his own country. The occasional, though deliberate, pessimist, however, may be forgiven his unhappy temper of mind, because in the times we live in he provides a pleasing contrast to the garish hues of thought that prevail. Our thoughts, like our garments and our conduct, are all tinted with the gay lights of an irresponsible optimism that can well endure an occasional dash of somberness if not too violently applied.

Where It Was Needed.

My young nephew and a neighbor's boy were discussing what they wanted to be when they grew up to be men. My nephew, who has a dog that snaps at the children, said: "I want to be a lion tamer." The neighbor's boy in a disgusted tone of voice said: "Better start on your dog first."—Chicago Tribune.

SOCIETY

OUT-OF-TOWN GUESTS HONORED

Mrs. Wm. Utterman, of Rockford, Ill.; Mrs. Earl W. Olson, of Chicago, and Doris Pammel, of Ames, Iowa, who are guests of relatives in the city, have been the recipients of considerable attention in a social way during the past week. On Saturday Miss Hattie Rochet entertained a party of twelve in honor of these ladies, and on Monday Miss Emma Siebrecht was hostess to a party of ten. Mrs. Edward Weimar entertained fourteen Thursday complimentary to the visiting ladies, and on Tuesday evening Mrs. Adolph Linse gave them a luncheon, at which twelve were present. Besides these entertainments there have been numerous dinners, rides and picnics.

Mrs. Utterman is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Benjamin Starch; Mrs. Olson is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matt Anderson, and Miss Pammel is at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pammel.

PARCEL SHOWER

Mrs. E. E. Moore, 1453 George street, entertained Wednesday evening at a parcel shower in honor of Miss Agnes Selund. About twenty were present, and the guest of honor was the recipient of many valuable and useful articles. Miss Selund is to be married on the nineteenth of August to Mr. Henry Todd of Park Rapids Minn.

Tired of Trimming Herself the Modern Woman Now Takes to Dressing Up the Canary and the Goldfish

BY MARGARET MASON

(Written for the United Press.) Little goldfish in a bowl, Birdies in a cage, You must now be all dressed up For it's quite the rage.

NEW YORK, July 29.—The modern woman, seemingly surfeited with trimming herself and incidentally trimming her husband has turned her attention to trimming up the household canary and the family goldfish. At least, if not the canary and the gold fish personally, she has their domiciles all dolled up.

Birdcages have become fantastic dreams of beauty and decorative art. No self respecting canary, linnet, or thrush can be expected to trill in anything but a cage of rush or willow from the peasant realms of Europe, or a wire and lacquer cage from China's shores. Japanese reed cages also are permissible but birdie simply must have one of these three decorative influences for surroundings.

Merely! Just fancy how plebeian and martistic nowadays would be that proverbial bird in a gilded cage. Cages are positively not being worn gilded this season.

Of the lovely willow cages, some of which are fashioned by peasant hands in the Black Forest and yet others in Brittany and probably most over in New Jersey or Brooklyn, there are those in the natural toned willow, those stained grass green and those enameled white or pastel pink or blue.

Even these willow cages feel the Chinese influence however, or at least their owners do, for milady hangs a Chinese jade bracelet to a short string of jade beads suspended from the middle of the cage for the songster to sway on in lieu of a prosaic swing. From the bottom of the cage she fastens with a thumb-tack a Chinese tassel green and gold.

The real Chinese cages are gorgeous in their scarlet green or black lacquer, ornate with gold. Round, oblong, square and octagonal, they are, and some shaped like pagodas two or three stories high. In the finest cages the water and seed dishes are of carved jade or ivory, beads and tassels deck the outside and always there is the bracelet swing.

As for the little fishes, red and gold, their crystal abodes are iridescent bubbles of antique Venetian glass of divers fantastic shapes. Some, high huge goblet shapes, others shallow bowls poised on slender stems, two handled Grecian urns of rainbow tinted glass and one, the quaintest of all, is a squat and sturdy crystal elephant.

Many of the round glass aquariums are raised on standards of carved or enameled wood and hand painted in water lilies and deep sea flora on the outside of the glass. Yet others simple and effective of line are the oblong and square aquariums, crystal clear.

Feathery green water plants and the decorative branches of Chinese "Thousand-and-years-green" make a fairy forest for the fishes and most artistic and modern note of all in latest fish fashions are the marbles of green glass that strew the golden gravel floor in the bottom of every aquarium that is a la mode.

Bauch remembered his deed, but said that he was sure he had a right to shoot. McDonough talked kindly to Bauch and said he was sorry that he, Bauch, had gotten himself in trouble. He did not mention the result of Bauch's shot.

Dr. Flynn found twelve shot in Bauch's right leg, the result of the police fire with riot guns. Bauch also has a wound in his right hand, but is resting easily today.

"Bauch is suffering with varicose veins," Dr. Flynn said, "and there is a possibility that the leg will have to be amputated."

Quarrelled With Wife
Although Bauch is a posted man, Mrs. Bauch told a reporter of The TRIBUNE last night that he came home yesterday afternoon in a state of intoxication. She said that he began to quarrel with her, and that she called to Mrs. Ernest Gershweske, next door neighbor, to summon the police. She told a long story of family friction which ended in her recent application to circuit court for a decree of separation.

Bauch has been living on the second floor of the barn back of the Summer street house since the family trouble started. It was there that McDonough found him Friday evening about 5:30 when he answered Mrs. Gershweske's call.

"Come down, I want you," McDonough called up through the open door. Bauch was standing half-hidden by the door frame. He made no answer.

"Come on," said the patrolman, and started to climb the ladder. Bauch threw up a 22 caliber rifle and shot once. The ball struck McDonough in the right cheek and passed down through the top of his shoulder. He dropped off the ladder and backed away, coughing and spitting blood. Shrieks of the women who were watching quickly gathered a crowd, and the policeman was assisted to the home of Charles Schaefer, where he was made easy until the ambulance arrived.

Bauch "Digs in"
While neighbors were frantically calling the police, Bauch barricaded himself in his barn. In front of the loft in which he slept there is a jut in the second floor, standing out from the main building on posts. From this step reach to the ground. Bauch nailed fast the door at the head of the steps, and posted himself behind it, after drawing up the ladder to his room. Then he waited for the arrival of the police, shouting threats at his wife and other women who were peeping fearfully from the corners of the houses in the neighborhood.

Meanwhile the police had loaded rifles and riot-guns into the department automobile and were dashing across the causeway at top-speed. The party was led by the chief and captain, and consisted of Patrolmen Koschnitzke, Wermuth, Rick, Ashland, Arneson, Lang, Roberge and Brittan.

As the car drew up before the house and the party tumbled into the yard, Bauch greeted them with a bullet. Some of the police posted themselves behind an outhouse near the barn. Others circled through the alley and took up posts in the carriage shed, not ten feet from where Bauch was hidden.

Chief Wings Besieged
Shots were exchanged between the party in the yard commanded by the chief, and the besieged man. The bullets smacked into the outhouse and the barn without effect, until Bauch showed himself for a moment at the door in firing. Chief Webber had been waiting with a rifle hand, and fired quickly at the man's left hand, and creased it between the thumb and palm. With a cry of pain Bauch dropped back, but he was not ready to give up. From the wagon shed Rick poked the muzzle of a rifle around the corner, and fired up at the imprisoned man. He missed.

"Don't shoot him in the body," shouted Captain Dugan. "Don't hurt him more than you have to." Rick dropped the rifle and reached for a riot-gun. Bauch appeared at the door, his bloody hand supporting the rifle while he aimed at the policemen in the yard.

The sawed-off shotgun roared, and Bauch toppled back into the loft, blood streaming from his leg. His rifle dropped.

The fight was over. The police seized a ladder, and rushed to the building, but there was no more resistance. Bauch was unconscious when they carried him down the ladder. He was bundled into the police car and rushed to St. Francis hospital, where his victim had just been taken from the operating table. Dr. R. E. Flynn picked the buck-shot from his leg and made him comfortable, before putting him to bed under guard.

STOVE BELCHES FLAME IN FACE SHOP DESTROYED

When Wesley Shisler, proprietor of a tailoring shop at 208 South Third street, opened the door of an unlighted coal stove in his place at 6 o'clock on Friday evening, ready to throw in a pan of sweepings, a sheet of flame struck him in the face.

He ran to the street and within a few seconds, the interior of his shop was a furnace. Shisler had no time to rescue anything. The fire department saved the building from all but damage amounting to about $100, although everything in the shop was a total loss. Shisler has not estimated the exact damage. He carried insurance of $500.

The fire started in the stove from spontaneous combustion, fire department officials stated. Shisler said he had been accumulating rubbish in the stove for some time. The stove contained several soiled, gasoline-soaked rags, he said, and these are believed to have been the cause.

ALL ABOUT THE "RED CROSS" THE NATIONAL ORGANIZATION AND THE LA CROSSE CHAPTER

RED CROSS DATES BACK TO MID-CIVIL WAR PERIOD HERE

American Red Cross Incorporated in 1865 and Has Grown Great Under Supervision of the Government

The history of the American Red Cross dates back to the international conference of Geneva, held in 1863, when it was recommended that there "exist in every country a committee whose mission consists in co-operating in times of war the hospital service of the armies by all means in its power."

The Geneva convention of 1864 and the Geneva convention of 1906 gave official status to certain officially recognized volunteer aid societies. These societies, because of the character of the insignia or badge adopted to distinguish their personnel and material (a Greek red cross on a white background) are universally known as Red Cross societies.

The American Branch
The American Red Cross is intended to aid in the prevention and alleviation of human suffering in times of peace and war. The original purpose of the Red Cross societies was to supplement the medical service of armies in time of war. The great need, however, of a thoroughly trained and efficient organization, national in scope and permanent in character, to render assistance after great disasters, has been so well established that many of the Red Cross societies have extended their functions to include relief operations in time of peace. Indeed, it has been proved that those societies which are most active in conducting relief and preventive measures in time of peace are best prepared to cope with the extraordinary requirements of war.

Recognizing this fact the United States congress in 1905 passed an act incorporating the American Red Cross and placing it under government supervision.

Must Make Report
The Red Cross is required by law to make an annual report of its proceedings to the war department. This report is transmitted by the secretary of war to congress, where it is printed as a public document.

The law also requires that the accounts of the American Red Cross be audited annually by the war department. This is the best possible assurance that the funds entrusted to the society for expenditures will be accurately accounted for and properly expended.

Has Endowment Fund
As a means of promoting the efficiency of the Red Cross, and of having it measurably prepared for emergencies, an endowment fund was created. The public is ever ready to contribute for the relief of suffering, following some tragic disaster, but it does not give steadily and readily to maintain the organization, which must be prepared at all times to respond promptly to appeals for help. To be ever ready, it was urgent that the Red Cross should have a permanent source of supply. The endowment fund provides an income which defrays in part the expenses of a continuous educational campaign in first aid and nursing work; keeps up a reserve organization of high grade, trained nurses; helps meet many minor relief appeals, and makes it possible to keep the organization ever ready to handle any emergency.

Great Peace Service
The magnitude of the work of the Red Cross since its reincorporation in 1905 can be suggested in a sentence. There have been over 75 relief operations following earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, fires, floods, famines, operations following earthquakes and wars in this and foreign countries, for which the American Red Cross has received and expended close to $15,000,000.

State boards, consisting of from three to ten persons, appointed by the chairman of a central committee, constitute a permanent emergency finance committee in every state. The governor of the state is the president of the board.

La Crosse of the 100
Besides these state boards, local organizations exist in over 100 cities. These local bodies are known as chapters. The La Crosse chapter is one of the last to be chartered. The chapter has its own officers and members. The chapter is of service in the collection of funds and supplies for relief.

In case of war the American Red Cross alone may lawfully care for our sick and wounded soldiers and sailors. It alone may conduct the hospitals, bury the dead and send messages from the wounded to their relatives.

Now Aids on Border
The Red Cross will collect, forward and distribute suitable articles for the soldiers in the camps. The La Crosse chapter already is engaged in making and collecting articles which will add to the comfort of the local soldiers now at Fort Sam Houston, Texas awaiting orders to go to the border.

BUG ON HAND CAUSES SMASH

When one of the millions of May flies which again attacked La Crosse on Friday, flew on Mrs. H. A. Lee's hand as she was driving her automobile across the Mississippi wagon bridge on Friday afternoon, she lost control of the car and it struck the side of the structure. A light was damaged.

LITTLE VOLUNTEER BODY BASE OF THE GROWING CHAPTER

Europe's Call Laid Foundation Which Now Under Taft Impetus Is Working Out Great Destiny

Red Cross history in La Crosse, so far as actual membership in the great national Red Cross body goes, dates from the period of the present mobilization of state troops on the Mexican border. But behind that lies real Red Cross work of two years' standing, work which won special commendation from Washington, even though it was unauthorized, volunteer service.

Heard Europe's Call
Red Cross history in La Crosse, then, actually dates back to the winter of 1914, just after the great European war broke out. The appeals to the great neutral nation for aid in the part humanity had to play in the tremendous conflict, over-sea found a ready and hearty answer in La Crosse. Leaderless at first, scores of women here began "knitting socks for soldiers," and scarfs and caps to boot. The workers sent in their articles in individual packages to the Washington headquarters.

First Organization
With so many women devoting their leisure to the work, it was inevitable that some sort of organization should be formed. Formed it was, then, at a gathering held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Sill, where there met most of the women who had individually felt and answered the call of Europe's need. From that meeting there resulted an informal organization of Red Cross workers. But few of them belonged to the American Red Cross. They had no authorization from the national headquarters of the society. Their organization was of the most sketchy sort. But they did yeoman service for the Red Cross, as numberless packing-cases of bandages, socks, caps, clothing and hospital supplies attested when they found their way to Washington for distribution.

Win National Praise
Funds were collected from business men who were equally interested in the situation, and to such good purpose were the funds and the efforts of the informal organization expended, that special notice of the work of La Crosse was taken by the national headquarters.

The local women had roughly divided themselves into three sections. One, headed by Miss Louise Easton and Mrs. Edward Evans, took charge of the work of preparing hospital supplies—rolling bandages, preparing pads and dressings. Another devoted itself to cutting and sewing shirts, pajamas, etc. The third section, led by Miss Helen Dorset, plied knitting needles and crochet hooks to good account.

Strictly Neutral
The informal organization worked all through the winter in this fashion. It was strictly neutral in its endeavors, although those who contributed their work were privileged to designate, if they desired, to which nation of the belligerents their supplies should be sent. To the credit of La Crosse womanhood be it said that there were scarcely half-a-dozen contributions so marked. Almost all the women worked in the broad interest of humanity, without regard to their individual sympathies.

Taft an Inspiration
As the Red Cross began to meet the situation on equal terms, and the bitterness of trench-life lessened as winter wore into spring, the work slackened. It was maintained through the summer, however, until the fall of 1915, when Former President Taft came to La Crosse, to be the guest of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association at their big banquet.

Membership Drive
Just then the American Red Cross had opened up a big drive for membership and increasing activity. President Wilson, by virtue of his office head of the society, had named Mr. Taft chairman of the central committee, and when the former president was in La Crosse he was bringing of enthusiasm for the Red Cross. During his stay here he was guest at the home of George Burton, his classmate at Yale, and Mrs. Burton prevailed upon him to speak to the American Revolution, to which members of the Twentieth Century club were invited. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. B. C. Smith.

Judge Taft took the Red Cross as his subject. He emphasized the great opportunity of the Red Cross as a field for patriotic endeavor, and urged the formation of a Red Cross unit here. With La Crosse women already active in the work, his advice fell upon willing ears, and the ground was ready for the planting of the seed of concrete effort in the direction of a chapter organization here when Mr. Taft returned at Easter this year.

His Second Message
Mr. Taft, on his second visit, again was the guest of the Burtons. So many interesting things which he spoke of in the way of conversation with his hosts appealed to Mrs. Burton as worthy a larger audience, that she obtained his permission to call a meeting of clubwomen at her home. To them Mr. Taft again urged the desirability, the opportunity of service and the duty of membership in the Red Cross. Positive action followed at once. There and then the La Crosse chapter of the American Red Cross had its conception, when a committee was appointed to get into touch with the Washington headquarters of the society, and discover all the details of organization. That committee consisted of Mrs. L. F. Easton, Mrs. R. B. Gelatt and Miss Frances Sill. It applied for authorization of a local chapter at once.

A Timely Word
It was some time before the national headquarters was able to reply to the local inquiries, swamped as it is with the imperative needs of the European situation. But it finally sent the desired authorization and instructions—just in time, as the event proved, to find La Crosse on the eve of sending 300 soldiers away to the Mexican border in answer to the president's call.

First extras issued on that eventful Sunday night of June 18 carried the call for an organization meeting of the Red Cross, which was held the following Saturday evening in the city hall. It was a public meeting, and enthusiastic support of the proposal to form a local chapter was voiced by many of those who spoke, interpreting the temper of the gathering. George W. Burton, at that meeting, was elected president. Andrew Lees vice president, John M. Holley treasurer and C. S. Van Auker secretary of the new organization. There was also chosen a board of thirty-six directors.

A few days subsequently, President Burton appointed the executive committee, upon whom devolves the greater share of the active work of the local organization's administration. This committee consists of ten—the officers, and Mr. S. W. Anderson, Mrs. L. F. Easton, Mrs. R. B. Gelatt, Mrs. Lilly L. Finch, Mrs. A. A. Chubb and Miss Helen Dorset.

Active Service Prompt
Under the well-worked plan of the American Red Cross, active service began at once. Already numerous circles of volunteers are at work, preparing supplies for the boys on the border, and plans are in train for the manufacture of a much greater body of supplies to be warehoused against possible future emergency for the United States. And, an active campaign has been planned, whereby it is designed to enlist fifteen hundred La Crosse people in the local chapter.

BENTLEY TREADS UPON REPORT HE WILL TAKE FIELD

"I am too busy to enter the fight for governor," Mayor Arthur A. Bentley on Saturday asked a TRIBUNE reporter to say for him.

"This is a big enough job for me," Bentley said, "I won't run for governor under any conditions."

Mayor Bentley made these statements in answer to several newspaper stories in papers throughout the state, which said he was going to be in the gubernatorial race.

The mayor returned from Milwaukee Friday night, after a conference with the democrats of the Karel fac-

The United States suggestion that the scope of the proposed joint commission's inquiry into United States-Mexican relations be broadened so the commission can get to the bottom of the whole trouble, the administration began today in earnest to the task of picking the United States members of the commission.

Brandeis to Head?
Intimations that the Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis would head the list of Americans became stronger. It was even said the matter rested with Brandeis himself to say whether he should take up the work.

Brandeis' name, it is said, is expected to appeal to the de facto chief and his group of radical leaders. The commission, it is understood, will hold its first sessions on the border where it can call upon American and Mexican army officers for opinions regarding the military questions involved in the negotiations. When that problem is solved, it is believed the commission will move north to some cool summer resort for its deliberations.

The questions of the rehabilitation of Mexico's finances probably will be considered.

IF YOU DONT BELIEVE JESS WILLARD SELLS CIGARETTES ASK TONY

If Tony Rademacher, who is one of the best trunk salesmen who ever left Milwaukee, sees this, it is possible he may blush. It is almost certain he will use language. For it will be the first intimation Tony has had that he did not spend three days in La Crosse last week hand in glove with those famous champions, Jess Willard and Frank Gotch. And thereby hangs a horse-laugh which is convulsing the Stoddard Hotel population and many, many businessmen who met Tony's protegee, "Mr. Willard."

It came about through the fact that Karl Bourk, who boasts Chesterfield cigarettes for Liget & Meyers, stands six feet seven inches from the ground in his socks, and weighs 243 pounds. C. M. Hatch, who is Bourk's boss, happened into the Stoddard, and ran into Tony. There was conversation, during which there loomed through the door the gigantic frame of Bourk accompanied by the thickest figure of his side-kicker, C. E. Adams. The Sells-Floto circus was in town, and in his gentle, joshing way Mr. Hatch introduced his subordinates as "Jess Willard" and "Frank Gotch."

Followed a loud report, which witnesses say was Rademacher falling for the game. He fell, and fell—he kept falling for three days, during which he trailed, in his cloud of reflected glory, all over the loop district, introducing the cigarette men as Willard and Gotch to all and sundry. Everybody else was wise, but none had the heart to puncture his bliss.

And so Tony has gone back to Milwaukee, happy in his famous friends, and firmly convinced that the stories that Frank Gotch broke a leg at Kenosha are just press-agent stuff. Incidentally, Tony thinks that the champion wrestler isn't nearly so big as his pictures would make it appear, but he's thoroughly satisfied with Willard.

Pity him, brethren.

OLD INHABITANT DIES AT MINDORO AGE NINETY-TWO

MINDORO, Wis.—(Special.)—Mr. Tosten Johnson, a resident here for 28 years, passed away at his home here Monday evening. Mr. Johnson was born in Norway in 1824. When a young man he came to this country and settled on the farm now owned by Arnt Johnson. In 1888 he moved to Mindoro, where he lived until death claimed him. Had he lived until Sept. 14th he would have reached the age of 92 years. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. John Hanson, La Crosse, Mrs. Ole Munson, West Salem and fifteen grandchildren. The funeral services were held Thursday in the Norwegian church. Interment was made in the Mindoro cemetery.

Local and Personal

Misses Irene and Melinda Miller entertained Lilah Ruland, Helen Pfaff, Nellie Olson, George Sisson, Alex and Harry Hanson Tuesday evening in honor of their brother Bernard and his wife from Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kepple are the proud parents of a baby girl born Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Underhill were business callers at West Salem Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. James McDonald visited at Martin Harbo's of Melrose Sunday.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Storaadt, Monday, July 24th a baby girl. William Kepple, Hildegard Voelbrecht and Mrs. Ebbie Erickson motored to La Crosse Monday evening to see Mrs. Kepple and babe at the Lutheran hospital.

Arthur Douglas of Melrose purchased a new Rio car from Congdon & Peterson Tuesday.

James Glennie, Ed Sebo, D. E. Congdon and Art Douglas motored to La Crosse Tuesday.

GOVERNOR PHILLIP FAILS SPARTANS AT COUNTY FAIR

SPARTA, Wis.—(Special.)—A large crowd visited the fair grounds again on Friday but were disappointed in not hearing Governor Phillip speaking. Yesterday was to have been Governor's day, but Mr. Phillip could not be present, owing to the fact that he is under a physician's care, and he telegraphed that the doctor would not permit him to come.

There were two ball games. Kendall won from Sparta with a score of 17 to 2, and Bangor from Melrose, score 14 to 4. The West Salem Military band furnished the music, which was greatly enjoyed by every one. Merchants and farmers began late in the afternoon to remove their exhibits, and by tonight the big Sparta fair will be a thing of the past.

Sparta Girls Wed Announcement has been made in Madison of the approaching marriage of two former Sparta young ladies, which will be of much interest to their many friends in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Will N. Wells announce the engagement of their daughter, Cora, to Guy R. Dana of Antigo, also of their daughter, Edith, to Charles Willet of Milwaukee.

The usual Sunday services will be held in the churches throughout the city.

Rev. A. S. Gilbert, pastor of the Methodist church at Onalaska, will preach Sunday morning in the M. E. church here, and also will conduct the evening service.

Rev. Almon O. Stevens of Beloit, pastor of one of the largest Congregational churches in Wisconsin, will occupy the pulpit in the Congregational church in this city.

Rev. Clifford and Rev. Hogan are enjoying their annual vacations. Rev. Clifford and family are at their summer cottage "Fern Dell Retreat" near Delton. Rev. Hogan and family are camping north of Warrens.

Fountain Finished The new fountain in the Court House park is completed and also two bubbling drinking fountains. The center of the fountain is a bronze column about twelve feet high, surmounted by the figure of a stork, with half spread wings.

Local and Personal O. F. Anole is remodeling and making modern the Callahan place, which he recently purchased on Court street.

Miss Ella Taylor of Dunlap, Ia., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. C. H. Gregory.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bergman have been to Rochester, Minn., this past week, where he is taking treatment from the Mayo doctors.

Mrs. J. J. Nestro of Delano, Minn., arrived here Sunday for a visit at the home of her son, J. W. Spradling and to attend the fair.

Thomas Moughmer of Cottonwood, Idaho, is visiting at the home of his uncle, J. B. Moughmer and family. He is enroute to Pennsylvania.

Miss Nell Rov returned home on Tuesday from Graton, S. D. where she has been visiting.

MILWAUKEE ROAD IMPROVES HIGHWAY TO NORTH M'GREGOR

M'GREGOR, Iowa.—(Special.)—As one of the good results of the construction of the new roundhouse and switching yards at North McGregor, motor and horse vehicle travel will have a good road to follow in leaving and coming into town from the west. deep waterway for Bloody Run. The Ruddy hotel and adjoining acreage has been bought and a portion of the bottom land owned by Manager Rosencranz of the Prairie du Chien sanitarium and utilized by him to furnish mud for mud baths.

Ernest A. Bergman of McGregor has become manager of the Commercial house at Prairie du Chien owned by Mr. Rosencranz of that place. It is reported that the old Dousman house on the river at Prairie du Chien has been closed.

W. F. Bickel, A. Sawvell, W. Eichendorf and A. Clemens have constituted a committee which has been busy this week marking the two new auto trails, the Geranium Trail and Park Highway leading into McGregor.

The Friday evening band concerts of the McGregor band are attracting increasing crowds. The band has been engaged to furnish the music at the Clayton county fair in August.

Rev. and Mrs. T. C. Neilsen of Volga City and Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Bird of Monona are among those who have taken cottages on McGregor Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones, American missionaries at Singapore, India, stopped at McGregor this week for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Hatwick. Mrs. Hatwick and Mrs. Jones in their early years were classmates at school. Postmaster and Mrs. L. N. Kramer, their two sons Robert and Donald and youngest daughter Alice left Monday for Buffalo, N. Y., for a fortnight's visit with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mann. They expect to go to Toronto, Niagara Falls and many other places in western New York and Canada by motor before returning.

Homer, Minn.

Mrs. Walter Nelson has entered a sanatorium near Minneapolis, where she is taking treatments for rheumatism.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Taintor, Margaret and Hugh Taintor and Mrs. Mary Kimble of Morgan Hill, Cal., motored to Utica Thursday.

Earl Nash, who is taking dentistry in the University of Minnesota, is spending his vacation at his home.

A. J. Ricks purchased a horse of J. W. Ramsden the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Taintor and baby have returned to their home in Money Creek after a short visit with Mrs. Elmira Taintor.

Mrs. Mary Kimble of Morgan Hill, Cal., is spending the week with friends and old neighbors.

Mrs. Margaret Tuell has returned to her home in Winona after visiting relatives here.

C. W. Lake has recovered from his recent illness and returned to his duties at the Fisheries Station here. An ice cream social will be given Saturday evening in the church basement by the Sunday school.

MUNICIPAL BAND'S FIRST BOOSTER CONCERTSUNDAY AFTERNOON AT PETTIBONE

The La Crosse Municipal Band will make its debut at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon in a "Booster Concert" in Pettibone park. Thirty-five pieces, under the direction of Mr. Ross Caldwell, will attempt a program selected with discrimination and calculated to appeal to its audience.

"This Park is for the Workingman and His Family."—W. A. Pettibone.

Upon the first page of its program the Municipal Band stresses their words of the late donor of the great island park where the concert will be given. Mr. Pettibone had been a large employer of labor, and knew the limitations upon out-of-door recreation for working people under the conditions formerly existing—conditions which through the efforts of men like Pettibone are happily now passing away. The words of Mr. Pettibone were considered appropriate for a concert to be given in his park in which the proportionate place and importance of the laboring people in the scheme of the American city is a new and significant factor. Arrangements have been made with Captains Otto and Saenger to run their excursion launches between Riverside Park and Pettibone park as ferries, charging 5 cent fares.

The program carries the proud announcement, "Members of the La Crosse Chamber of Commerce." Its complete text follows:

GLORIA'S ROMANCE

68 MR. and MRS. RUPERT HUGHES

NINTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, banker and railroad magnate, with his sixteen-year-old daughter, Gloria, is wintering at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious but willful young lady who chafes under the restraining hand of a governess from whom she repeatedly escapes. Her childish capers cause young Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. She steals from her room at night and in an auto plunges into the surf where she leaves the car. Becoming lost in the everglades she falls into the hands of the Seminole Indians. She is rescued and returned to her father who had offered a reward for her return. Gloria falls in love with her rescuer, Freneau. Five years later she leaves school and meets Freneau at the theater, his attention having been occupied with her sister-in-law. He has forgotten Gloria. Gloria feels that her one dream is shattered. Later Freneau persuades her to forgive him. Gloria's sister-in-law, Lois, becomes intensely jealous and Doctor Royce discovers in her an ally to assist in thwarting Freneau. Doctor Royce warns Freneau that there is another woman besides Gloria. Freneau grows sleighing with Gloria without her father's knowledge. It results in pneumonia for Gloria, whose family becomes incensed at Freneau when they learn the truth. Royce is summoned to alleviate Gloria's suffering. Freneau's finances being low he approaches Pierpont Stafford for a loan. Doctor Royce again warns Freneau of his conduct. But Lois, learning of Freneau's betrothal to Gloria, threatens him with dire punishment. Her husband, Gloria's brother David, becomes suspicious; he plans a trap for his wife. Freneau detection of Lois' threats agrees to spend a week with her in the Catskills. He plans to have Mulry send Gloria a bunch of telegrams. Lois' husband threatens to kill a man. After Freneau takes leave of Gloria she sees from her window an attack made upon him when he goes to meet Lois. Doctor Royce convinces her that what she has seen is the result of delirium. Later a telegram, followed by a letter, comes from Freneau. She replies but her telegrams are returned. The first morning she is allowed from her room, she accidentally sees the supposed suicide of Freneau reported in the paper.

The Shadow of Scandal

Pitiful fate played on Gloria. She had ordered her wedding gown while she was dangerously ill. But now her bridegroom would not appear. The newspapers said that he was drowned in the lower bay. She believed she had seen him throttled to death on Riverside drive, and her mourning was embittered with doubt.

At such an inconspicuous moment the little bridal gown came home from the dressmaker's to torture her with its beauty and its futile intent. Gloria was in her bedroom, looking out of her window at the fateful monument below, living over again the scene of the murder.

With the pathetic droop of her head, and her arms hanging at her sides, and the long lines of her gown sweeping about her inert, almost lifeless form, she stood like a Tanagra figure of grief. Poor little soul, she was just entering the real world of womanhood when the grim arms of tragedy enfolded her! It was her first great sorrow.

Her old nurse came toward her. Gloria moved, gave a little moan of horror, and ran to put her head on the nurse's breast, sobbing out her pent-up agony.

"It can't be true! I can't bear it! It's too horrible. A week ago he was alive and happy. Now he—oh, I'll go mad if I think about what he is now!"

"There, there, Miss Gloria," the nurse implored her. "Try to keep your mind off your loss as much as you can. Think of your father and your brother and how much they need you. That will help you." A knock was heard at the door and the nurse went to it to admit Doctor Royce. His heart contracted with quick pain at sight of his idolized patient's distress. Gloria sank into a chair and made a brave effort to stifle her cries, gritting her teeth together and wringing her hands, but in vain. The doctor prepared a sedative and held it out to her.

"Take this, dear child; it will quiet your nerves." But before the words were finished she had brushed the glass from his hand.

"I don't want your opiates, Stephen; there is only one medicine for my pain, and that is revenge. Will you help me to that?"

He shook his head sadly. Struck with a sudden memory, Gloria pulled him toward the window.

"I saw him murdered and you told me it was delirium. Why?"

"You admitted it yourself when you received his letters and telegrams," Royce answered hastily.

"But I don't believe that now. And I don't believe that you do either."

Royce was silent. Gloria went on:

"It was too much of a coincidence," continued Gloria. "I am not a child any longer, Stephen, and though this tragedy has nearly unbalanced my mind, I am still able to think and reason. Why, if this had happened a little later I would have been his wife."

Her lips trembled like a hurt child's and Royce turned his head away in pity.

"If I were his wife I should not sit idly by and let the demon who took his precious life go scot free, should I? Should I, Stephen?"

Royce was silent. Gloria went on:

"I am going to act as though I were his widow in reality, as I am in heart. I shall go to the police." Royce started. "And tell them everything. Will you help me?"

"I will do anything I can, Gloria, but first we must consult your father."

Doctor Royce was dumbfounded at the new Gloria he had to face, and to save from monsters she knew nothing of—the juggernauts of scandal and publicity.

He determined to confer with Mr. Stafford at once, and descended the stairs to find Pierpont in his library.

Royce told Mr. Stafford things which amazed and horrified him, and when he had finished he said: "I did not want you to know any of this as long as I could keep it from you, Mr. Stafford. There seemed to be nothing for you to do and I felt that you had enough on your shoulders as it was. I do not know if I acted wisely in keeping you in the dark so long, but now that Gloria wants to go to the police with the matter I had to tell you so that we could keep her from it and save an investigation that would ruin your son's wife and bring horrible notoriety to our innocent Gloria. Whoever it was that killed Freneau, he must have had his reasons. He has made good his escape. Incidentally he has saved Gloria from marrying a scoundrel. I could almost thank him for that. But we must never let Gloria know Freneau's unworthiness; it would leave too deep a scar on her fresh young heart, ruin all her ideals and kill her faith in humanity."

Stafford gave Royce his hand. "How right you are, Stephen. You are a great and a noble friend to her and to my children. Gloria will get over her lover's death. She would never recover from the knowledge of his treachery. Yes, we must save her from that. May God help me to save David, too."

After Royce had left her Gloria went to her dressing room. Her maid and the nurse were unpacking a large box. They tried to conceal it as she came in, but she commanded them to give it to her. It was her wedding gown.

Clasping the soft shining robe to her heart with a little cry, she motioned them to leave her alone with it. Then she sank to the floor, clutching it in her arms. She pressed her lips to the satin folds and cuddled its beauty to her cheek. As she fondled the precious lace in her fingers, she visioned herself in the gown. She was standing at the altar with Freneau by her side; all the friends of her world were sitting in their pews behind her. To her rapt ears came the organ music swelling into the wedding march, as with her head erect and her heart high she came back up the aisle on her husband's arms.

The dream crumbled and the girl woke to the truth with nothing left of her dream but the gown in her arms. She kissed it reverently, and laid it away in its box, as in a coffin. Then her tears vanished and her eyes hardened with resolution. She went down to the library, where she found her father pacing the floor in deep meditation. Gloria ran to him and put her arms about his neck.

"Daddy," she spoke determinedly. "Have you notified the police yet?"

Pierpont was fully prepared for this. He shook his head.

"Why not, father? You must, or I will, at once."

"Gloria, we can't tell the police anything. If they learned that you were engaged to Freneau, the house would be besieged by detectives and reporters. What evidence have you? Nothing but the imagination of a delirious girl. If you told them of your delirium you would only stir up a scandal. It would have no value in court."

Gloria stared at him incredulously, but he went on vividly to convince her.

"We should be laid open to enormous publicity at once. There would be headlines in all the papers about you every day. 'Gloria Stafford Involved in Freneau Mystery'; 'Secret Engagement of Heirless Just Discovered'; 'Gloria Stafford Claims She Saw Freneau Murdered'; 'The Beautiful Daughter of Pierpont Stafford'—"

She groaned. "Oh, don't, father; I can't bear it." But Stafford continued inexorably: "You could never leave the house nor enter it without a dozen cameras being focused on you. The police would swarm the house, demand all your private correspondence with Freneau. If you refused them anything they would use force and I should be powerless to help you. And what the police get the reporters get. Do you want your love and your sorrow given over to the gossips? Now do you see why we cannot set the machine in motion? I have only one desire, to protect your reputation. If you want to protect Freneau's, you will keep silence. Promise?"

Gloria was convinced, at least for the moment. She nodded her head in obedience, kissed her father's cheek, patted him absently, and left him. But once alone again she burned with resentment at the plan to shield the murderer of her lover. She respected her father's dread of publicity and she shared his hatred of publicity, but she would not relinquish her demand for justice. She realized, however, that she would have no help now in her hunt for the murderer. But this only strengthened her determination. Alone she would unravel the secret knot and bring the guilty to punishment.

Meanwhile Lois, in her own passionate way, was suffering also, but her suffering was tinged with a certain amount of horrible satisfaction. Death, instead of Gloria, had taken Freneau from her. Gloria could not claim one smallest part of him from her now. He had never cared one atom for Gloria; he had told her so. It was for financial reasons alone that he had intended to marry Gloria, but she could not buy him now. Freneau had been struck down in his youth and strength by some fiend, but he was hers, hers in death as he had been in life. Neither Gloria nor her own husband, David, could ever take him from her now.

Lois went to her dressing table, took from a locked drawer her opera bag, and drew from it the silver-framed photograph of Freneau that she had stolen from Gloria. Staring at it longingly, she kissed it, then, pausing with anxious jealousy, lifted it from its frame and read the inscription on the back:

"To Gloria, my only love, with all my heart, Dick."

Lois recoiled from the words as if they struck her in the face. Then, turning the photograph toward her again, she gazed at it searchingly. Suddenly she smote it with her clenched fist and threw it from her. But at once, with swift revulsion of feeling, she knelt and clasped it to her bosom again, bursting into dry sobs and misery.

She was interrupted by a knock at the door and the warning voice of her maid: "Miss Stafford is calling, madam."

Lois was startled. She rose and slipped the photograph between two volumes in a book rack on a table and called to her maid: "Show Miss Stafford up here."

Rushing to her dressing table, she hastily ran a powder puff over her face and brushed back her hair.

When she turned it was to confront Gloria clad in heavy mourning. For a moment the sight of the crepe stung Lois to jealous frenzy; next she deter-tests of Lois, and left her. She took the photograph with her, and Lois dared not protest.

Far away in a Colorado town lived a woman who after all was most to be affected by Richard Freneau's death, for she had given him more than Gloria with her young girl's heart or Lois with her guilty love. She had given him birth.

In a quaint, old-fashioned sitting room the venerable, sweet woman was sitting in a rocking chair before the fire. On her mantel were portraits of Freneau as a child and as a man. She put down her knitting and rose with some difficulty. Clinging to the mantel she took down one of the photographs and turning it, read in the beloved handwriting: "To my darling mother from her adoring son, Dick."

Terrified, Gloria snatched her hand from his arm and shook her head, moving swiftly away from him. Pierpont followed and clasped her hand, pointing to the photograph accusingly, he said:

"Everyone will ask who it is you are engaged to. You are not engaged to him any longer. I insist on your removing that ring."

Gloria protested. Pierpont stood firm. She studied him anxiously. He reiterated his demand. She refused. Baffled in his coercion, the old man began to plead. She was all he had. He was old and heart-broken. He could not endure the sight of her in black. He was jealous of the dead man's hold on her heart. Pity moved her as fear could not. To comfort him she yielded. She drew the ring from her finger, dropping it into his outstretched palm. He clutched it with a sigh of relief and put it in his waistcoat pocket.

At the finality of this Gloria's cheeks flamed.

At this moment Burroughs entered with a black mined to make some excuse to wear black herself. She felt that she had a better right to mourning than Gloria had.

Advancing, she kissed Gloria's cool cheek, murmuring: "How are you, dear? Do you think you ought to be out on such a cold day?"

"Oh, yes," answered Gloria listlessly. "I thought a drive would do me good. I just dropped in on you for a moment."

Putting up her furs, Gloria wandered aimlessly about the room, then sank into a chair by the table. The women eyed each other with constraint. Neither wished to speak first of Freneau. Gloria noted the haggard mien of Lois with wonderment. Casting about for something to say, she fumbled with the books on the rack. The picture of Freneau fell out.

The blood pounded in Gloria's heart and spread a quick flush over her face as she picked it up. She turned it over and read the inscription. She asked bewilderedly: "How did this come here?"

Lois, controlling herself with difficulty, tried to speak.

"Was it you, then, who stole it from my room?" Gloria hurled the question with set lips and glittering eyes.

With a desperate inspiration Lois explained. "Yes, I stole it. I was going to surprise you with it. And then he died."

Gloria was touched, and believed as impulsively as she had suspected.

Throwing her arms about Lois, she embraced her. "Thank you, dear; it was wonderful of you to think of that. But don't take the trouble. I must go now." She slipped into her coat in spite of the pro-

arms and clasping her hands found they enfolded picture of Freneau. Anger mastered him; he took the photograph from her, saying: "I wish you would put that out of my sight and out of your life."

Gloria stared up at him in amazement, tears trembling on her eyelashes. Then she gently disengaged the picture from his grasp and hugged it to her breast.

"Why do you hate him now? What do you know against him? How can you be so cruel, so unjust?"

Stafford experienced a slight feeling of remorse. Gloria put her hands pleadingly on his shoulders, and he tried to take her in his arms again, but noting the engagement ring on her hand, he froze. Then, with determination in his tone, he commanded: "Take that off!"

Terrified, Gloria snatched her hand from his arm and shook her head, moving swiftly away from him. Pierpont followed and clasped her hand, pointing to the photograph accusingly, he said:

"Everyone will ask who it is you are engaged to. You are not engaged to him any longer. I insist on your removing that ring."

Gloria protested. Pierpont stood firm. She studied him anxiously. He reiterated his demand. She refused. Baffled in his coercion, the old man began to plead. She was all he had. He was old and heart-broken. He could not endure the sight of her in black. He was jealous of the dead man's hold on her heart. Pity moved her as fear could not. To comfort him she yielded. She drew the ring from her finger, dropping it into his outstretched palm. He clutched it with a sigh of relief and put it in his waistcoat pocket.

At the finality of this Gloria's cheeks flamed.

At this moment Burroughs entered with a black dinner gown on her arms for Gloria. Pierpont motioned it away.

"No, not that, Burroughs! Bring Miss Gloria a bright gown. Black is not becoming to her at any time. You understand me, Burroughs?"

The maid nodded a respectful "Yes, sir," and withdrew to the dressing room. She presently re-entered bearing a gown of brilliant turquoise blue, festooned with garlands of varicolored flowers. Gloria shuddered. But her father nodded his head.

"That's it. Now I shall have my own little beautiful girl to dine with me."

Gloria studied the blue gown for a moment, then snatched it from Burroughs, threw it on the floor in wrath and burst into tears.

The maid was at a loss. She pondered, then went again to the dressing room and brought forth another gown. "Here, Miss Gloria, dear, here's your little black tulle dress with the gold and black brocade bodice. Mr. Stafford won't mind that and you'll feel better in it, too."

Gloria patted Burroughs on the shoulder tenderly. "Yes, that will have to do," she murmured sorrowfully, and let the maid dress her.

The table, laden with its lace and silver, was alight with candles; the butler was waiting; a man stood behind each chair. Seating themselves, Pierpont took up his cocktail glass and lifted it to drink to Gloria, who picked up her own glass with a far-away look.

Suddenly, it was as if Freneau stood beside her. She imagined he was putting his cheek close to hers to sip from the same brim. So vividly did she feel his presence that she gave a startled gasp and put down her glass.

Her father half rose: "What is it, honey? You look as pale as a ghost."

Gloria shivered at the word "ghost," but summoned a smile to reassure him. "It's nothing, dad. I'll be all right in a minute." And raising her glass again, she put it to her lips.

The butler at the serving table handed the soup plates to the second man, who conveyed them to Gloria's side.

Pierpont chatted jovially to entice Gloria to a cheerful mood. She tried to be gay with him, but her heart would not respond. She tried to eat, but food was distasteful to her, and, dropping into a reverie again, she seemed to see Freneau as she had so often seen him, enter the room and greet her.

Again the vision became almost real; it was as if he put his arms about her and embraced her, then her eyes fell to her left hand, which their engagement ring had adorned, and its nakedness rebuked her. She seemed to see the look of anguish and reproach on Freneau's face as he took account of its absence.

She put her hands before her face. Pierpont looked up anxiously, then went to her side. She shivered with a chill. "I'm so sorry, daddy, to spoil your dinner. Please let me go to my room. I'll pull myself together after a bit. It's just a fit of nerves. No, don't come with me; I'm all right. Finish your dinner, dear; don't mind at all. I'll be all right."

She dragged herself wearily away from him and on up to her own room. She threw herself down upon the bed moaning: "They've even taken your ring from me. O Dick, Dick, come back and help me."

Stafford could hardly think of Freneau without wishing to kill him over again with his own hands. It was unthinkable that his girl should be allowed to wear his engagement ring and mourn for him.

He went to Gloria's room, finding her as he had expected, brooding by the window. He took her in his

Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, July 29.—Favorable weather from the northwest caused a decline in wheat values today. Early advances over yesterday's close were offset by considerable selling on the reports. July closed down 1/2 c at $1.19 1/2; Sept. down 1 1/2 c at $1.21; December down 1 1/2 c at $1.24 1/2.

Corn was irregular. Heat damage to corn crops were responsible for gains in July and September. July closed up 1/2 c at 83c; September up 1/2 c at 78 1/2 c; December down 1/2 c at 68 1/2 c.

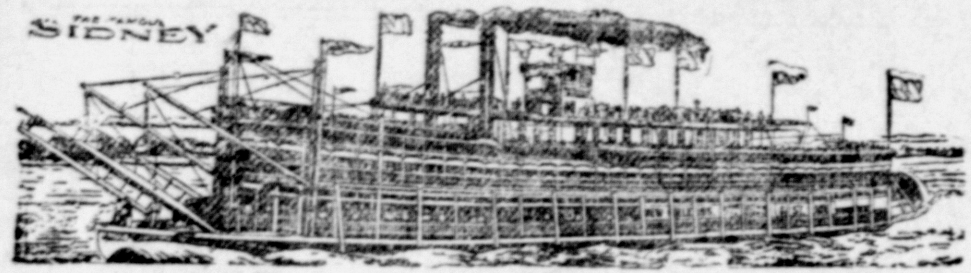

Oats declined further on the weakness in wheat and the uncertainty in corn. July oats closed down 1/2 c at 41c; September down 1/2 c at 41 1/2 c; December unchanged at 43 1/2 c.

Provisions ruled slightly higher. Trade was quiet.

SHAWKEY HOLDS SOX HITLESS FOR SEVEN INNINGS

CHICAGO, July 29.—The hurling of Bob Shawkey featured Friday's pastime, the Yankees beating the White Sox, 5 to 3. Shawkey did not allow a hit for seven innings, but the Sox got to him for three tallies in the ninth round. Williams started for Chicago, but was nicked for one run in the first on a single and a double and two more in the seventh were made easy by wild throws. Cicotte was bumped for two runs in the eighth and Faneur finished the pastime. Score: R H E
New York . . . 001000202—5 9 2
Chicago . . . 000000003—3 6 4
Batteries: Shawkey and Nunnaker; Williams, Cicotte, Faneur, Schaik and Lapp.

Philadelphia, 6; St. Louis, 8. Philadelphia was trounced by the Browns again Friday, 8 to 6, the Athletics turning five errors along with eight hits for the home side. Sisler cleared a full house in the second with a triple.

In five games the Athletics scored but twelve runs on forty-seven hits, while the Browns scored thirty-six runs on forty-one hits. Score: R H E

MATTY'S REDS IN SECOND TEN-FRAME GOTHAM DEFEAT

NATIONAL LEAGUE
NEW YORK, July 29.—Christy Mathewson's Cincinnati Reds lost another ten inning game to the Giants Friday, 3 to 2. Cincinnati took the lead in the second, but the Giants went them one better in the eighth. Mitchell being driven from the box. Cincinnati tied things up in the ninth, but Burns singled to start the tenth, went to third on a wild throw and scored on a wild pitch.

Score: R H E
Cincinnati . . . 010000010—2 7 3
New York . . . 0000000201—3 7 3
Batteries: Mitchell, Schulz and Clark; Benton and Reriden.
Brooklyn, 9, St. Louis 5. Brooklyn defeated St. Louis Friday, 9 to 5, scoring four runs in an eighth inning rally after each team had scored five times in the second inning. Mowrey started the rally with a single, his fourth hit of the day. An error, Stengel's triple and doubles by Baugh and Wheat completed the job.

Score: R H E
St. Louis . . . 050000000—5 10 1
Brooklyn . . . 05000004x—9 13 1
Batteries: Steele, Jasper and Snyder; Coombs, Dell, Marquard and McCarty.

Chicago 1, Boston 2. BOSTON, July 29.—Nehf outpitched McConnell Friday, the Braves defeating Chicago in the final game of the series, 2 to 1. The Cubs' only run was a result of Maranville's error in the fifth.

Score: R H E
Chicago . . . 000010000—1 6 2
Boston . . . 00110000x—2 4 4
Batteries: McConnell, Seaton and Fischer; Nehf and Gowdy.

Batteries: Jacobs, Cooper and Schmidt; Bender and Burns.

To Remove Stoppers.
When a glass stopper cannot be easily removed rap the neck of the bottle with some glass object. This sets up a sympathetic vibration and avoids breaking the receptacle in case one should heat it to loosen the stopper. Find an object of the same material as the stopper, if glass or metallic, and rap steadily on all parts around the stopper until it is loosened.

About the Bible.
Letters to the number of 3,586,473, forming 775,693 words, 31,727 verses, 1,189 chapters and 66 books, make up the Bible.

About the Wedding Ring.
The wedding ring is of gold to signify the nobility and durability of affection. The form is round to imply that love should never end. The place is on the third finger of the left hand, where the ancients thought there was a vein that came directly from the heart, and where it is always in view. The third finger being a finger least used, the ring may be least subject to wearing out.

Hurt Sensitive Customer.
An absent-minded clerk in a San Francisco sporting goods house recently cost the firm a good customer. The buyer asked to see some dog collars, selected one and paid for it. Right there the absent-minded one spoiled it all by asking: "Shall I wrap it up and send it, or will you wear it?"

CHAMPION WELCH HANDS A BEATING TO BEN LEONARD

No Tangoing in Ten-round Mill in the Brooklyn Arena Friday Night

NEW YORK, July 29.—Freddie Welsh showed several thumping good reasons why he is champion lightweight of the world when he licked Benny Leonard at Washington park, Brooklyn, last night.

There wasn't a sign of a tango step in anyone of the ten rounds. It was a stand up and drag out from the start. Excepting one round, the third, Welsh won all the way. But he showed a little of Abe Attell. Battling Nelson, and Joe Gans combined, to turn the trick. Benny was no slouch.

See Leonard Champion
It was the old story of science, punch, condition, and experience against science, punch, condition, and a younger vigor. There is not a man or woman of the thousands who saw the battle who doesn't believe Benny Leonard will wear the lightweight champion crown sometime in the future, if he does not spoil it all by thinking he's good enough now to quit learning.

For the first time in a decade of moons New York's fight experts agreed on the result, the quality of fight put up by both men, the titleholder's championship ability, and the challenger's championship possibilities.

Both men were prime. Their condition at the end showed that. Welsh, throughout showed every evidence of his realization that he had a lot to live down. Leonard, in every piston-like swat and crafty step, showed he wholly realized his opportunity.

FIVE TOURNEYS ARE SCHEDULED FOR TENNIS MEN

With five tournaments scheduled for August, the La Crosse Tennis club begins its second season Monday next. Play for the city championship in singles and doubles will begin July 31 and continue through the month of August. Every variety of match is included in the schedule, singles and doubles for men, singles and doubles for boys, singles and doubles for women, and mixed doubles for men and women. Silver cups are the prizes in each entry. About one hundred players will participate.

In addition to the local matches, a La Crosse team will play Prairie du Chien, Saturday, August 5, in that city. The probable lineup for La Crosse is Perry A. Sletteland, C. R. Pieper, J. R. Moore, Dr. Rosholt, J. M. Bridgman and A. P. Hankerson.

The following Saturday a Winona team will play here probably with the same men. The match will be held at the Country club at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

The big interstate tournament in which a number of local players will enter begins August 14 at Prairie du Chien, and includes players from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois. Singles and doubles will be played. Sletteland and Pieper are scheduled to play Vernon and Stewart, who hold the championship of Iowa, Illinois and Missouri, at the Country club on Friday, August 18.

Twenty in Women's Meet
Twenty entries have been received for the women's tennis tournament which opens Monday. President Charlotte Colman announces. Entries close at 6 o'clock tonight. The games will be played on all courts of the city as arranged at the convenience of the entrants, and score cards will be posted at the Horton and Black confectionery at Sixth and Main streets.

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

Yesterday's Hero
Casey Stengel. Casey went to bat as a pinch hitter in the eighth inning of the Robins-Cardinals game and batted out a triple with two on. He then scored on a long fly and Doubert came across on a pair of hits putting the game in the refrigerator.

Eddie Roush ran a mile and a yard to make a flying catch of Hans Lobert's long drive in the second inning. Hans just couldn't believe the fly caught and on around.

Bob Shawkey pitched a no hit game for seven innings, then let up a little but came with the bacon.

Pitcher Dubuc of Detroit gets credit for three of the four Tiger wins over Washington. He pitched a shut-out yesterday, went into one game with the score tied and into another with Jennings' men one run behind.

Silk O'Loughlin has won his battle with the bands. Ban Johnson forbidding music while play is going on. The Com Pass will have to work between innings.

It was a perfect day in the field for Hinnie Grohe. Eleven chances without a spill.

BETLESS RACING WINS
CHICAGO, July 29.—Hawthorne racing followers were optimistic here today over future prospects for the staging of the sport in Illinois as the thirteen days racing meeting at Hawthorne track prepared to stage its last races for the meet today. Officials of the Illinois Jockey club declared that the success of the so-called "betless" racing has encouraged them to hold another meet this fall.
